Woman Flier, Two Men Die In Labor Day Plane Crashes

Florence Klingensmith
Killed as Propeller
Blast Rips Ship.

Weather Ace, Aid

Throng in Ohio.

Glenview, Ill., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Florence E. Klingensmith, 26, pretty aviatrix from Minneapolis, was killed instantly today when participating in the 100-mile free-for-all feature contest of the International Air Races.

The tragedy was witnessed by 25,000 persons. Women screamed when the ship went into its last nose dive.

Her ship, a Gee Bee racer, caught in the propeller blast of a plane in front and a portion of the wing fabric was ripped off and fluttered to the ground.

Goes Into Dive.

Miss Klingensmith righted the ship and started to the south of the port. She gradually lost height and finally went into a dive about 2 miles from the stands.

The crash of Miss Klingensmith's powerful ship brought to a tragic end the international air spectacle, which included the setting of a new world land plane speed record by James R. Wedell and the start of the historic Gordon Bennett balloon races.

Miss Klingensmith was the first woman ever to enter such a feature race as the one today and was flying well up in the field, averaging more than 200 miles an hour with the race more than half run when the accident occurred.

The aviatrix had been flying for three years. She won the Amelia Earhart trophy last year and held the women's record for making consecutive loops.

The flier tried desperately today to save her life by using her parachute. The chute was found open but tangled in the wreckage of the plane, fastened to her body.

Daring Amazes Pilots.

The aviatrix had entered the feature race of the day in a gesture of feminine bravado. Miss Klingensmith kept well up in the race during the first seven laps, gaining seconds on the pylons, where she banked so sharply veteran pilots shook their heads in amazement.

Then on the eighth lap she came down to the home pylon traveling more than 200 miles an hour and tipped her ship for the bank around the pylon. The strain was too much.

The propeller wash from the plane in front added to the wreckage strain on Miss Klingensmith's ship and a section of the left wing fabric tore loose.

The flier kept control and leveled the ship off. For perhaps a mile the craft climbed gradually, but then started to settle and went into a dive.

10,000 See Two Killed.

Cleveland, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—While 10,000 persons looked on, pilot Ralph C. Wensinger, 28, famed for his daring flights into high altitudes for the United States Weather Bureau, and a student-assistant, plunged to death in an airplane crash today.

The tragedy occurred in a Labor Day air exhibition at Chilpewa Lake Park, 30 miles southwest of Cleveland.

Only a few minutes before Wensinger and the student, Samuel Versaci, 19, were killed, a third occupant of the plane, Miss Viola Pincombe, 21, Berea, Ohio, escaped by making a successful parachute jump as part of the exhibition.

Following Miss Pincombe's leap, Wensinger sent the plane up to about 4,000 feet and was "stunting" when the ship went into a spin and dove rapidly.

Viscount Grey's
Condition Worse

Former British Secretary
Now Unconscious.

Christon Bank, England, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Viscount Grey, of Fallodon, former British foreign secretary, whose serious illness became worse today, was described as unconscious in a physician's bulletin.

It was understood he had been practically in a state of coma since Saturday night. At that time he talked with the physician about his illness.

Forest Fires Delay
Canadian Autoists

Winnipeg, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Five hundred motorists were reported stranded at Whittemouth, Ontario, tonight, unable to get through forest fires raging seven miles along the trans-Canada highway.

Many of the motorists have been held there since Saturday night. One report said the railway station at Elma had been destroyed.

Earhart Trophy Winner Killed

FLORENCE KLINGENSMITH,
Minneapolis aviatrix, who won the Amelia Earhart racing trophy last year, was killed yesterday when her plane crashed in the international air races at Glenview, Ill.

5-Mile-Minute Air Speed Mark Set by Wedell

Aviator's Unofficial Time
Lowers Doolittle's in Chicago Meet.

Chicago, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—A new unofficial land plane speed record of 5 miles a minute was set today by James R. Wedell, Louisiana speed pilot, in the international "Air Races."

Wedell made four runs over a 3-kilometer, straight-away course. He made a top speed of 316.55 miles an hour. Average for the four laps, which probably will stand as an official speed record after checking of the timing device, was 305.33 miles an hour.

Higher Speeds Are Made.

The speeds on each of the four dashes, the higher figures being made with the wind: 316.55, 299.32, 311.15, and 294.32 miles an hour.

The previous record was 294.38 miles an hour, held by Jimmie Doolittle, with whom Wedell has had a speed feud of long standing.

Wedell made the speed flights in his "Number 44" plane of his own design, in which he finished second to Doolittle in the Thompson Trophy race.

Minor Claims New Record.

Roy Minor, of Los Angeles, claimed a new speed record of 201.35 miles an hour for planes of 550-cubic-inch displacement over a closed course, when he shot Ben O. Howard's tiny, white plane, "Mike," around the pylons in the 50-mile Chicago Daily News Trophy race.

Minor won the event on each of the four days of the meet. Second place went to Gordon Israel, of St. Louis, and third to Art Chester, of Joliet, Ill., a consistent money winner of the meet.

Navy Balloon Forced Down

Lands on Long Island;
Only Two Race Entries
Remain in Air.

Bradford, Conn., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—The balloon of Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle, U. S. Navy, participating in the James Gordon Bennett Cup races, landed tonight at Hotchkiss Cove, on the shore of Long Island Sound.

The police said both Commander Settle and a companion landed unhurt. One of them remained on guard by the balloon, while the other went into Bradford Center to make a telephone call.

Utica, N. Y., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—A balloon, believed to be one of the participants in the Gordon Bennett race, was sighted from the Municipal Airport here tonight. It was impossible to determine the identity of the entry.

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—A balloon, traveling high, was seen over Ottawa late tonight.

Chicago, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—The field in the international James Gordon Bennett balloon race had been narrowed to two contestants tonight, with one American entry and the Polish bag still apparently drifting.

Belgian, French and German balloons settled to the earth in Michigan within a 200-mile radius of the starting point and apparently were out of range of victory.

The balloons believed still in the air were those piloted by Ward T. Van Orman, an American civilian participant, and the Polish ship of Capt. Franciszek Hynke.

U. S.-Mexican Claims Settlement Held Near

Mexico City, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Puig Casauranc tonight said an announcement on negotiations for a lump-sum settlement of claims pending between the United States and Mexico could be expected within a few weeks.

Pay and Displace
All Officers.

Havana, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Noncommissioned officers and men of the Cuban army and navy, headed by Sergt. Batista took command of military and naval forces tonight, displacing all officers.

Sergt. Batista declared "we will not relinquish control until a truly revolutionary government has been established in Cuba. Then the command will be given back to the officers."

"The trouble arose over a proposed pay cut and dissatisfaction of the soldiers with the colonels in command," he added.

"Secretary of War Ferrer tonight harranged the troops, who were in an ugly mood. Ferrer was not molested, when he was leaving the barracks."

"The dissatisfaction was due to a proposed cut in pay and a reduction in the size of the army. I think order will be maintained and the situation solved, although not as well as I hoped."

In celebration of the last day of his cruise, the President early yesterday hooked a sea turtle, weighing more than 100 pounds.

The Roosevelt party proceeded to Quantico, Early said it was expected the party would dock at the Navy Yard here about noon today.

Florida Surveys Damage in Millions as New Storms Strike.

(Associated Press.)

Sweeping across the Gulf of Mexico, a hurricane that left more than 100 dead and great property destruction in Cuba approached panic-stricken Texas coastal communities last night while eastern Florida was buffeted by other rain and wind storms.

Striking at Lake Worth, south of Palm Beach, the hurricane ripped through the south central interior of Florida and left a trail of more than a million dollars property damage and one known fatality. Citrus groves estimated from 75 to 80 per cent of their crops was destroyed.

Precautions Urged.

A 200-mile strip along the coast received Weather Bureau advice to take all precautions with life and property as a 90-mile-an-hour wind struck Padre Island, 20 miles north of Brownsville, at the southernmost tip of Texas.

Several miles inland, Texas towns never before visited by winds as disastrous as this roaring hurricane, made ready for the great blow which reached a velocity of 45 and 50 miles an hour at Brownsville late yesterday.

A public emergency was declared at Corpus Christi, Tex., by Mayor William Shafer, residents were ordered to remain on high ground and forbidden entrance without a pass to business sections.

Beeville, 45 miles from the coast, was crowded with refugees, who sat about in motor cars under heavy, gray skies.

Freeport Evacuated.

The town of Freeport, with a population of about 3,000, had been virtually evacuated by all save the Coast Guard crew. Communication lines to the city failed.

Similar conditions prevailed at Velasco, another coast town of about 1,200 population. At 4 p. m. the wind there had a velocity of 35 miles and the tide was 8 feet. The Coast Guard moved several families from low lands.

Tropical disturbances moving inland from the Bahamas struck furiously in Florida. Reports of damage were scanty because of broken communication lines. But it was learned as high as three-quarters of the citrus crop was ruined in some sections.

Sebring seemed to be the center of the Florida storm. The town was hit by 65-mile-an-hour winds, wireless reports said. At fashionable Palm Beach, the famous Ocean

President Roosevelt, aboard the Astor yacht, Nourmahal, headed into a Potomac River anchorage at Quantico, Va., last night, planning a final night aloft before returning to the White House early this afternoon.

In celebration of the last day of his cruise, the President early yesterday hooked a sea turtle, weighing more than 100 pounds.

Stephen East, a presidential secretary, reported that the Roosevelt party had gone ashore late yesterday from a temporary anchorage off Stratford Cliffs, Va., for a visit to the birthplace of George Washington, at Wakefield. Foreign Minister Jonkheer de Graeff, in a letter to Ramsay MacDonald, president of the conference, said the Dutch government regretted conference efforts have not stabilized monetary relations or diminished restrictions to world trade.

Therefore, the letter adds, the government considers itself entitled to liberty of action and renounces the truce, effective in one month.

Bailey Jailed After Escape; U.S. Quiz Opens

Special Guard Placed Over
Cell After 100-Mile Journey.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Heavily guarded, Harvey Bailey, charged with the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, oil man, and with participation in the Kansas City Union Station slaying, was in solitary confinement here tonight after a four-hour dash for freedom from Dallas jail.

"Well, I got out didn't I," Bailey snarled.

Recaptured at Ardmore after he sawed his way out of his Dallas cell, forced his way from the jail with a pistol and kidnaped Nick Trepp, turnkey, Bailey was rushed here by a five-car caravan of officers.

Made No Resistance.

Officers said Bailey's dash was to have ended about 35 miles east of Ardmore, where members of an underworld gang, of which Bailey allegedly is a member, were waiting.

Hale Dunn, Ardmore chief of police, said Bailey made no resistance when officers surrounded his damaged car after it crashed into a curbing in flight.

Arrangement of Bailey on the kidnapping charge is set for tomorrow in the federal court here.

Bailey escaped, let the rocks fall where they may."

Starts Jail Probe.

Frank J. Blake, chief of the Dallas Department of Justice office, called a conference of his aids and county officials at the suggestion of Edgar Hoover, in charge of the Bureau of Investigation at Washington.

William Decker, chief deputy sheriff in charge of the jail in the absence of Smoot Schmidt, sheriff, said he intended to find out how Bailey escaped, "let the rocks fall where they may."

Both investigations sought to determine whether a member of the sheriff's office might have aided in getting the saws and pistol to Bailey.

Battle Flares Among Rival U.S. Workers

President of National Federation Assails
A. F. of L. Affiliate.

Convention Told Green
Promotes "Racket;"
Government Hit.

Rivalry between the National Federation of Federal Employees and American Federation of Government Employees, affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, flared into open denunciation yesterday.

In Kansas City, President Luther C. Steward, in his convention report to the National Federation of Federal Employees, denounced the A. F. of L. affiliate as an "abjectly unsuccessful" attempt to inflict damage upon the National Federation.

Officials of the American Federation of Government Employees here, who hold their own national convention, September 11, said they planned no formal reply. Vice President David R. Glass said he did not care to answer "so flagrantly inaccurate a statement."

Assails A. F. of L. Chief.

President Steward, in his convention address, turned from an attack on "inconsistencies" in the Federal Government's treatment of its own employees, to assail President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, and the affiliated Federal Employees.

Rivalry of the two groups dates from the 1931 Vancouver convention of the American Federation of Labor, when the organization's stand on personnel classification started a controversy which ended in a split.

By organizing the American Federation of Government Employees shortly afterward, the A. F. of L. "closed the door to reunification," President Steward charged.

Charges "Racket" to Green.

"The plain fact is that in spite of many statements made by the president of the American Federation of Labor on the subject of 'rackets,' he has done nothing less than sponsor and finance a racket in continuing to do so at the present writing," Mr. Steward charged.

Mr. Steward told convention delegates "a better Federal service" will develop out of the present confusion over the Government's economy policies.

"Conditions that have been won after periods of struggle, and have been taken away during the last three years, will be regained," he said, "and the steady advance toward a thoroughly satisfactory Federal personnel condition will be resumed."

Tragedies Blamed on U. S.

He traced many tragic incidents in the Federal service, "mental and physical breakdowns, premature deaths and suicides" to alleged injustices under the Federal economy program, and pointed out that while the Government has called on industry to stop firing, raise wages and cut hours of work, it has not followed this advice in its own setup.

Attacks on Federal employees he laid at the door of "selfish and shortsighted individuals occupying positions in the business world where their views carried far greater weight than was justified."

His "Sweetshop Tactics."

He said some of the new Federal economy legislation involves "sweetshop tactics," through which many employees are forced to work 6 1/2 and 7 days a week, 12 to 14 hours a day, and "are the subject of profit-making on the part of the Government through changes that have not been adjusted to the business world."

Miss Gertrude M. McNally, secretary-treasurer, reported 85 new local unions have been added and 23 reinstated in the last two years.

Kaltenborn Reports

Davis to Keep His Hands Off Europe's Woes

Roving Ambassador Hints He'll Be There Just to Aid Arms Talk.

S. S. Washington, Sept. 4 (AP).—A firm resolve to steer clear of European political controversies was indicated today by Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at Large.

Mr. Davis further indicated his mission to Europe was merely to be available for discussion in technical preparations for the disarmament convention.

He expects to begin disarmament conversations with British statesmen immediately on arrival in London Wednesday.

He apparently was not disturbed by reports in Britain that his coming forecast a naval construction race.

It was understood Mr. Davis feels as long as nations are not violating the London naval treaty there is nothing to be excited over.

American delegates to the Geneva conference apparently are not ready to make optimistic predictions that a pact will be completed this fall. However, they are hopeful because of indications German and French differences on the armaments supervision before reduction are considerably improved.

Addressing the State American Legion convention, he said he did not believe "Johnson has helped the plan by his optimistic statements."

"We must not expect too early results from the NRA," the governor continued. "We have been a long time getting into this predicament and we will not come out of it in a hurry. We cannot expect a miracle overnight."

Mr. Landon is a Republican.

Power lines were off at many points, including Brownsville. Communications systems were crippled, the water supply was off in some coastal areas.

Business Area Flooded.

The center of the business area here was inundated. Water was lapping at the foundation of the Nueces Hotel, Corpus Christi's largest hostelry.

Water Enough

Rain During Firemen's Parade Keeps Crowd Moving About.

Stormy weather! Through the beating rain they marched, bands playing bravely. The instruments caught up the tune. Down pelted the rain. Up swirled the music: "Stormy Weather."

Firemen and water, prime allies in a common cause, marched together. The crowds cheered the firemen, applauded the fire demonstrations, smiled at clearing air, but they didn't like the water.

Most of the time the crowd was drenched. It stood by. It shouted approval at floats, marchers, fire companies, beauty queens.

But gusty sheets of rain were hard to withstand. Spectators scattered before the stinging raindrops, and returned in the lulls.

Seas Become Helms.

The parade was not without its comedy. Soapbox seats became impromptu helmets. Newspapers made headcovering in the soaking rain.

The bands started out with razor-sharp creases in trousers. Trousers were as soggy stovepipes at the end. A float featured two squirting hoses—and everybody laughed.

Even an umbrella vendor ran for shelter in the downpour.

Noon. "Miss Prosperity," high on her hoop-skirt, skirled by. The rain ceased. Crowds surged back out of doorways. Rain started again.

Judges braved the downpour. They stood to a man when the colors passed. But their bus was too convenient. They finished their judging from inside the bus.

Throne No Shelter.

From rain to clear weather, and back into rain rode Santa Claus, strangely out of season. Behind him rolled a float.

A grand lady on her float throne ducked under cover. She reappeared when the rain stopped.

Contestants of the morning's bicycle and roller skating runs pushed in and out of the throng dejectedly. More cheerfully rolled other cyclists, on tandems, high-wheelers.

Muffled drums beat. Swinging drumsticks thumped on soggy calfskin. A Marine bass horn player, disgusted with bailing water out of his horn every 10 paces, turned it upside down and played it that way.

Thousands of newspapers went for headgear.

Newsboy: "Paper, lady?" Lady: "No, thanks. I'm drenched already."

One Green Engine.

The screams of the sirens were almost unceasing. Bystanders remarked it appeared firemen had their best chance in a year to make long-drawn noise.

The longest diagnosis for a first-aid case during the parade: Elderly gentleman; treatment for nervousness, result of being frightened by the crowd running for shelter.

The first green fire engine seen here was in the parade.

The floats had one casualty. Russell Eggleston, 1723 D street southeast, was overcome by carbon monoxide gas while driving the Heurich Brewing Co. float. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Beauties Unperturbed.

Warren Dues, 23-year-old national fire hero, stood on a car running board, almost unrecognized by the crowd. Most spectators failed to spot the young man who risked his life rescuing seven children from a burning house.

The bathing beauties on the Harbor Precinct float were virtually the only persons unperturbed by the rain. Their swimming suits were perfect for the situation.

Their rain-wet faces solemn, the lads of the Crocyden Drum Corps made a brave show. Tiny drummers trudged along valiantly, the crowd greeting their perfect formation with cheers.

Like pages at King Arthur's Table Round were the lassies flanking the prize-winning Washington Gaslight Company Band. Statuesque, in medieval doublet and stockings, they tilted trumpets in a picture of knighthood.

Theme Song Popular.

The children who splashed in the small swimming pool on Rescue Squad No. 2 float seemed unceasing in energy. Mothers wondered what kind of vitamins they thrived on. It seemed to be the Community

100 Casualties Given First Aid During Parade

Doctors and Nurses Patrol Each Block on Line of March.

More than 100 persons were given first-aid treatment yesterday along the line of the firemen's Labor Day parade, but few serious injuries were reported at local hospitals. H. T. Hopper, of No. 1 Engine Company was the only fireman to receive treatment for injury. He suffered a sprained neck.

The first aid corps was under the direction of Acting Coroner A. M. Gruber MacDonald and Vincent Sardo, local undertaker. More than 25 ambulances and 100 nurses and doctors patrolled every block of the congested area. Ambulances were donated by local hospitals and undertaking establishments.

List of Casualties.

Those treated at Emergency Hospital were: Ester Campbell, 13, Clarendon, Va., fainting; Harvey Caldwell, 28, Capitol Heights, Md., fainting; Emanuel Allen, 70, Raleigh, N. C., fainting; Ruby O'Gene, 18, 623 C street southwest, fainting; Irene Taylor, 20, Lanham, Md., fainting; May McDonald, 15, 2106 N street northwest, fainting; Bessie Pearson, 36, 3113 Thirteenth street northwest, fainting; Rollins Weeks, 17, no address given, fainting; Annie Johnson, colored, 24, 1220 Potomac street northwest, fainting.

Those at Casualty Hospital were: Lillian Brown, colored, 33, 1543 Corcoran street northwest, fainting; Mary Rickett, 32, 300 Twelfth street northeast, fainting; Hilda Ernest, 15, 2670 Morris place northeast, fainting; Russell Eggleston, 30, 1723 D street southeast, overcome by carbon gas while in float; Esther Franke, 19, Brentwood, Md., fainting; Mildred Fortune, 17, 214 Thirteenth street southeast, fainting; Dorris Rickett, 17, 214 Thirteenth street southeast, fainting; George Lorenz, Capitol Heights, Md., fainting; Catherine Hutchinson, 1385 C street northeast, fainting; Mrs. Henry Chalkley, 123 Massachusetts street northwest, fainting; Catherine Griffin, Alexandria, Va., fainting; and an unidentified man at Providence Hospital suffering from heart attack.

Given First Aid.

First Aid Station treatments: Iris Belmont, 21, Sibley Hospital, fainting; Charles Raymond, 14, 463 E street southwest, felled by bicycle; Julian Fiora, Pennsylvania, fainting; Virginia Moore, 16, 410 Fourth street northeast, cramps; Libian Corbett, 13, 1110 Fourth street northeast, fainting; Margaret Alley, 123 North Carolina avenue southeast, cramps; Ben James, 19, 1524 W street southeast, cramps; Leo Diver, 17, 1217 Owens place northeast, abrasions; Miss Annie McLean, 35, 1228 Seventh street northeast, fainting; Evan McCovey, 1912 Eleventh street northwest, hysteria; Paul Oliver, 21, 1306 E street southeast, nervousness; Ernest Hillon, 16, 2607 Morris place northeast, fainting; Swiche Willard, 10, 630 Alabama avenue northwest, fainting; Mildred Wheeler, 88 L street southwest, fainting; Harry Caldwell, 58, Capitol Heights, Md., hysteria and heart attack; Raymond W. Lawson, 51, 527 Eleventh street southeast, hysteria; Helen Yang, 15, Cottage City, Md., fainting; James A. Chesson, 78, 1419 Columbia Road northwest, fainting; Ruth Lee, 14, 1338 First street southwest, fainting; Harold Smith, 406 I street southwest, abrasions, and H. T. Hopper, 32, No. 1 Engine Co., sprained neck.

Center Band that first swung into the "Stormy Weather" theme song for the march. The crowd loved it. On one part of the Avenue, an informal piece of acrobatics diverted the crowd. Standing on his father's shoulders was a 3-year-old lad, unconcerned by his prominent place. His father reached up, swung him head downward, flipped him, and, catching him by the shoulders, set him gently on the sidewalk. Then he picked the boy up and held him above the crowd again, seated on his hand.

The last band blared. The last siren screamed. The last bedraggled marcher passed. The parade was over.

Out came the sun. Stormy weather was done.

Zoo Guarded

Houston Animal Keepers Take No Chances in Hurricane.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 4 (AP).—Attendants at the Hermann Park Zoo here were taking no chances with their charges during the hurricane today.

Hans Nagel, keeper, said two men with guns were stationed in the zoo to shoot any wild animals that might escape during the blow.

Ford Ignores U. S. Deadline For NRA Code

Motor Magnate Silent in Vacation Camp as Limit Passes.

Big Bay, Mich., Sept. 4 (AP).—With the deadline for acceptance of the NRA automotive code at midnight tonight, Henry Ford, as yet unsigned, today gave no indication of interrupting his vacation for a return to Detroit or a statement of his position.

Ford's continued refusal to comment on his plans, and his apparent intention to remain secluded in his Huron Mountain camp near here until next Friday, lent weight to the steadily growing opinion that the motor magnate is launched on a "go it alone" campaign, outside the NRA.

His plea for public support, observers believed, will be an enlargement of the brief comment made in Detroit today by a Ford official, the effect that "we're already living up to the NRA code."

The opinion expressed in the statement is known to be shared by the motor magnate.

Ford, expected to come here today, failed to make the journey. Messages for him were delivered to the camp but, so far as was known, Ford was not in communication with anyone during the day.

In Detroit, officials of the Ford Motor Co. remained uncommunicative.

The belief is that Ford will make his plea appeal on the basis that already he pays his 40,000 workers more than the minimum demanded by the code. The Ford minimum is 50 cents an hour for a 40-hour week, while the code prescribes 45 cents an hour for a 35-hour week.

Provisions of the code calling for collective bargaining for workers and the right of the Code Administration Board to inspect the books of signatory companies are known to have met with Ford's disapproval.

No Concern to Johnson.

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Whether Henry Ford chooses to qualify for the Blue Eagle or not is of no serious concern to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, he said tonight.

"There is no action I should take," Johnson said. "I'm going to wait and see what happens in the Ford case."

Johnson intimated he believed Ford was prepared to do something spectacular, "indicating he shared the belief of many that the Detroit manufacturer was once more directing his concern along an individual, independent program."

"Nobody is forced to sign the NRA code," Johnson explained. "If they want a Blue Eagle, however, they must conform to certain requirements."

Rain Routs 50,000 As Firemen March

the year before in getting up floats of interest and beauty. The 50 yesterday, it seemed, could be surpassed.

Thirty floats entered by commercial firms provided a garnish to the procession that brought ripples of comment from the crowds.

Daughter Aids Bargain.

A familiar figure in the parade was Mrs. Vernon Orison, pretty daughter of Sgt. A. J. Bargain, grand marshal of the parade. She joined her father in the reviewing stand after doing her role as official hostess.

Two thousand members of the Modern Woodmen of America, in convention here, marched bravely in the parade while the rain dealt damage to their uniforms and to the costumes of the woman contingent of the conventioners.

Both male and female contingents of the Woodmen were equipped with silvered axes. Their drill execution with the symbols of their orders drew heavy applause.

Famous Horse in Line.

Stepping a bit gingerly, Tom—the only fire steed led of the famous trio, Tom, Gene and Barney—helped haul an old pumper up the Avenue. Many an eye dimmed as the spectators recalled that Gene and Barney had passed on.

The New District water tower was one of the few local pieces of apparatus in the parade. Green-castle, Pa., presented the oldest extant piece of apparatus.

One hundred and fifty units of fire-fighting machinery were in the parade. Burnished and glistening, they came from nine States—Indiana, West Virginia, Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, North Carolina and Maryland.

Last night the visiting firemen were on the way home, happy, though still drying out, and planning for next year's parade.

Sweden Gives Col. Lindbergh Guard on Visit

Flier, Wife at Stockholm on Bid of Prince; Stay to Study.

Stockholm, Sept. 4 (AP).—Making his first visit of any length to the land of his grandfather's birth at the invitation of the Crown Prince of Sweden, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife arrived at Hagernas Naval Air Base, outside Stockholm, today.

He is scheduled to remain in Sweden a week to study winter and night flying.

The visit was not announced and only a few newspapermen and the official welcoming committee were present when the colonel landed. The couple were escorted on a brief sightseeing tour before being taken to the Royal Automobile Club, where they will reside.

Included in the group that greeted the pair inside the guarded naval inclosure were Laurence Steinhardt, American Minister to Sweden.

Col. Lindbergh has asked that he be permitted to live quietly here while conferring on aeronautical problems, and the crown prince has assigned him an adjutant to protect him from the public.

It is assumed Col. Lindbergh may avail himself of an opportunity to visit Swedenborg, a community of 300 persons in southern Sweden, where his grandfather, Klas Mansson, lived before moving to America and where two cousins, Frans Lindbergh and Bertha Persson, now reside.

Aboard the Jelling was a kayak, which was presented to the famous flier and his wife by Greenland natives, and in which they spent much time in shore waters when held down by bad flying weather.

Supply Ship Returns.

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—The freighter Jelling, supply ship on the aerial survey of the North Atlantic made by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife, docked today at Brooklyn.

Commercial Planes Gain Speed in 1933

Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Commercial aircraft have gained more speed in 1933 than in any previous year, P. G. Johnson, president of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, asserted today before the aviation group of the International Automotive Engineering Congress.

Cruising speed of commercial planes was about 100 miles an hour from 1925 to 1927, Johnson said. Last year the average was 115 miles an hour. This year, he said, multi-engine passenger and express planes were capable of cruising 171 miles an hour.

Hitler's Activities.

Hitlerism is accomplishing impossibilities in Europe. The Poles and the Russians, according to yesterday's news, are being brought together. France is sending a mission to Moscow. Italy, in union with France, is befriending Austria. England, which for years has been trying to be the friend of Germany, is standing alongside of France and Italy.

Meanwhile, Hitler threatens the world with active hostility if anybody disagrees with his policies and practices. It has happened before.

The United States is not specifically mentioned, but it is implied in the threats of revenge by Germany in case American citizens express dissatisfaction and alarm because of persecutions being carried on in Germany against a number of groups described in terms of race, religion or political creed.

Harvey Bailey's Escape.

Although the notorious desperado, Harvey Bailey, was soon captured after his escape from jail at Dallas, the ease with which he outwitted and overpowered his guards must be a cause of embarrassment to local and Federal authorities. The Federal officer who had stood guard at Bailey's cell was withdrawn a few days ago because it was supposed that it was impossible for Bailey to escape. Then a visitor who was not previously searched was allowed to see Bailey. The desperado is supposed to have obtained his weapon from this visitor.

This is a poor record for the officers charged with guarding Bailey. The Department of Justice should take no further chances with men of Bailey's type. They should be under the eye of Federal guards night and day until execution of their sentence has begun.

Why China Changes Slowly.

In one generation astonishing transformations were effected in Japan. Western ideas and customs were rapidly adopted in the island empire, while the neighboring Chinese plodded slowly along in the ways of their ancestors, but slightly influenced by Occidental ways. The reason for this difference, according to the noted Chinese scholar, Dr. Hu Shin, is that in Japan the usages of the western world were imposed by the ruling classes, while in China no such imposition is possible from above.

The alien culture grafted on the stock of traditional Japan was only possible, Dr. Hu Shin finds, because control of the people has always been in the hands of the rulers of the country. Cultural changes in China are found to be necessarily slow, since they spring from the masses themselves and are long in gaining sufficient strength to influence the mode of life among the nation's 400,000,000 inhabitants. The doctor finds great drawbacks in China's diffused method of altering customs, which at times results in blind and indiscriminate selections, entailing mistakes, loss of time and much waste.

Notwithstanding the general disinclination to adopt the ways of foreigners it is surprising to find how quickly specific innovations have spread over China. The use of the spoken language for both prose and poetry, in place of the classical literary language, was accepted by all young students in the course of three or four years. Within one year the fashion of bobbed hair became popular in all Chinese cities. But for the most part it is found that China's change to western cultural manners is being brought about through slow methods lacking in coordination. However, in the end Dr. Hu Shin feels that this form of development may prove the better way of solving the basic problems of the nation's life and achieving a civilization not incompatible with the spirits of both the old and the new world.

A Brilliant Parade.

The firemen's parade of yesterday symbolized the undaunted spirit of the volunteers of Washington and neighboring cities and towns. Swinging along with music and merriment in occasional drenching showers, the marchers seemed to be spurred forward instead of being deterred by adverse weather. They presented a fine appearance, with shining equipment and well-ordered ranks, and were heartily applauded, one after another, as they swept past the reviewing stand. The crowds were somewhat intimidated by the heavy showers at times, but most of the sightseers returned to the curbs and cheered the passing men.

To all the visiting fire companies Washington extended a hearty welcome and grateful appreciation of the trouble taken by them to share in the Labor Day parade. Fortunately, the storm passed later in the day, affording all visitors an opportunity to see the sights of the National Capital and return home in comfort.

It was a most appropriate observance of the holiday, both by participants and spectators. The common spirit of Americans in fighting for better times was exemplified in the cheerful disregard of weather conditions. The many beautifully adorned floats made a brilliant spectacle along Pennsylvania avenue, notwithstanding the overcast skies.

The Constitution Under the New Deal.

Representative James M. Beck, former Solicitor General of the United States, told the members of the Maryland Bar Association last week that the Constitution of the United States has been "in process of slow demolition" for the last 50 years and that destruction is proceeding at an accelerated rate as a result of the "new deal" legislation.

Since the Constitution was adopted a nation of farmers has developed into a highly industrialized state, with a large proportion of the population living in cities and towns. This transformation has not, however, involved destruction of the basic constitutional forms of our Government.

Adaptation to changing social and economic conditions has been effected by interpretation through court decisions, and changes have been made by amending the Constitution in accordance with prescribed methods of procedure. Had the Constitution been regarded as a document to be construed narrowly, the whole governmental structure built upon it undoubtedly would have fallen into "careless ruin" years ago, because political instrumentalities and institutions have to be flexible in order to survive.

The United States has undergone many revolutionary economic changes in the last century and the changes have been especially marked and politically significant in the field of communication and transportation. As local industries serving restricted areas have expanded into large scale industries, as the growth of transportation systems has caused trade and commerce more and more to ignore State lines, the activities of the Federal Government have correspondingly multiplied and altered in character.

Nevertheless, the transformation has been effected within the limits fixed by the Constitution. Furthermore, there is nothing to indicate that the "new deal" laws will call for a different method of treatment because the domestic crisis has accelerated the pace of legislative change.

The courts have not abdicated their right to pass upon the constitutionality of the emergency legislation popularly referred to as a product of the "new deal." But their view as to the constitutionality of particular statutes, or administrative practices under them, will not be apparent until test cases come before them for decision. Lawyers can cite innumerable cases to show how the Constitution has been interpreted to fit the conditions of a changing society. The required adaptation has been particularly needed and correspondingly conspicuous in the extension of Federal legislation to cover a multiplicity of business and trading operations once considered strictly intra-State in character, hence beyond the scope of the Federal authorities. Many of the questions as to the constitutionality of the "new deal" laws concern the limits to which Federal power may be stretched to control businesses formerly treated as intra-State. It is worth noting that the power to regulate inter-State commerce, according to the Supreme Court "extends incidentally to every instrument and agency by which such commerce is carried on, may be exerted to its utmost extent over every part of such commerce, and is subject to no limitations save such as are prescribed in the Constitution."

Dr. Butler's statement that none of the amendments to the Constitution since the Bill of Rights has touched the foundations of our form of Government except the eighteenth amendment provides a strong defense against those who seem to think that the Constitution is not suited to present-day conditions. The popular revolt against this particular amendment, which has involved an intolerable invasion of the police powers of the State by the Federal Government, is the best possible evidence of the vitality of the Constitution. It is also a convincing refutation of the charge that the people of the United States are ready to abandon the form of government guaranteed to them by the Constitution.

Taxes After Repeal.

In a radio broadcast, Col. Howe, secretary to the President, discussed various questions affecting the dispensing of liquor if the eighteenth amendment is repealed in November, as is now quite generally anticipated.

There appears to have been some confusion as to when the repeal vote will become operative. Col. Howe stated that a Supreme Court decision makes it clear that nullification of the prohibition amendment will not await certification to the Secretary of State by three-fourths of the States and official proclamation to that effect; repeal will date, he says, from the day on which the thirty-sixth State votes to ratify the repeal amendment.

After repeal the only duty of the Federal Government will be the prevention of shipments of liquor into dry States, and the collection of taxes under the revenue laws. The constitutional change will in no way affect laws enacted by the various States prescribing the extent to which they shall have prohibition or conditions under which liquor shall be sold within their borders. So far as Federal regulations are concerned, liquor can be manufactured and sold after repeal by any one complying with the usual bonding and tax requirements.

The beer act of last March, in addition to taxing the manufacturers and the beer itself, states that no special tax or administrative provision of the internal revenue laws applying to beer or any fermented malt liquor is repealed. The special tax of $50 for wholesale dealers and $20 for retailers must continue to be paid. Relative to the tax on distilled spirits used for beverage purposes, which now amount to $6.40 a gallon, the Department of Justice rules that owing to the automatic nullification of present regulations, the tax will revert to the old rate of $1.10 per gallon.

This lower tax, it was held, would be a blow to the bootlegger, who has been counting on the high rate to permit his continuance in a profitable business. The tax reduction also would materially change some of the estimates as to the amount of revenue the Government would derive from a resumption of legal liquor sales, but a change in tax rates is expected at the next session of Congress.

Exchange Restrictions.

It is encouraging to note that American exporters are obtaining some relief in connection with the large amounts of frozen funds which have been tied up for many months in various Latin-American countries, due to severe exchange regulations which prevented transfers from being made to the United States. Payments for goods and earnings from American-owned properties have alike been held in foreign banks. Brazil and now Argentina have begun to relax the stringency of their exchange restrictions.

The American Manufacturers Export Association, in cooperation with the United States Department of Commerce and the Argentine Exchange Control Commission, have worked out a plan that will permit the owners of probably as much as $15,000,000 on deposit in Buenos Aires banks to transfer these funds to other members of the export group who can utilize them in Argentina. The transfer will be made at the prevailing rate for blocked exchange and American dollars paid in New York for the Argentine pesos. It is hoped that eventually this exchange may be extended to include more than $40,000,000 of American funds tied up in Argentina.

European nations also are active in their endeavors to release frozen funds in South America, with notable success in Chile, where compensation arrangements have been made with France, Spain, Sweden and Czechoslovakia.

In connection with the present negotiations being conducted by the American Government, seeking to improve trade relations with the southern republics through bilateral treaties looking to a larger exchange of non-competitive goods, the figures issued by the Department of Commerce covering the year ending December 31, 1932, are of interest. The total value of American international trade for the year was $518,918,000, a decline from the previous year of about one-third. Owing to lower prices, quantity figures would make a more favorable showing. Of the total trade the balance in favor of the twenty Latin-American republics amounts to about $23,000,000. For the year American exports declined 37.3 per cent, while imports were reduced 32.4 per cent.

Arms and the World.

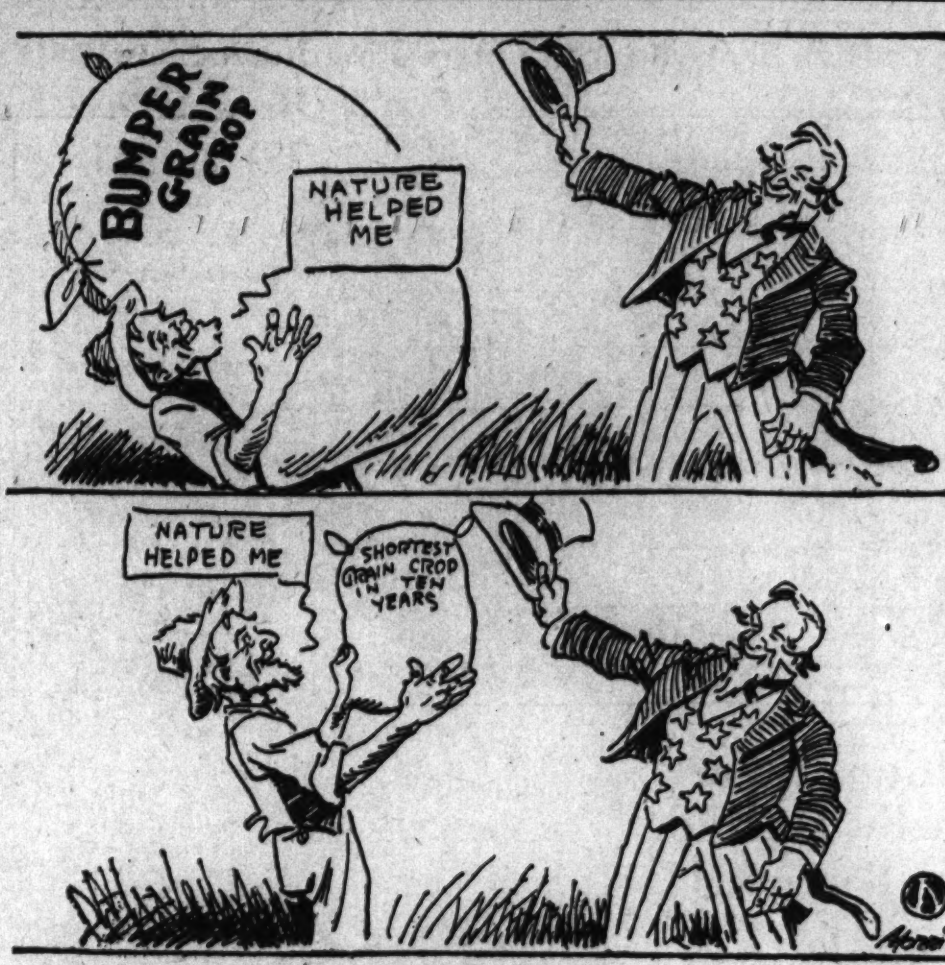

From the Kansas City Star.
Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American delegation to the world disarmament conference in Geneva, has sailed for Europe, to resume the discussion of a problem so complicated that it has defied the efforts of the conferees to find a solution for more than a year and a half. One of the complications that has received less general attention than its importance justifies is the question of the private manufacture of arms and ammunition and the international trade in those commodities. Only persons who have examined the figures, compiled annually by the League of Nations, can realize the extent of the trade in war materials and its political implications.

The money value of the arms and ammunition exported from one country to another in the ten years from 1921 to 1931, for example, exceeded $600,000,000, and this figure does not include either military aircraft or naval armaments. Nor, of course, does it take into account any war material manufactured in a country for its own use. Only about ten nations are in a position to manufacture armaments on a large scale, and three of these, the United States, Great Britain and France, have supplied approximately 75 per cent of the total world trade in arms and ammunition since 1920.

In other words, most countries have to import their war materials, which are manufactured, to a large extent, by various private companies situated in the United States, Great Britain and France. Furthermore, very serious charges have been brought against some of these companies, including the accusations that they have promoted war scares and armament races, to improve their business, and that they have made every attempt to prevent international agreements for the limitation of armaments, for the selfish protection of their own interests.

It might seem, therefore, as if a simple method of encouraging peace would be to discourage this trade in war materials; for if most countries had no weapons, they would be less likely to go to war than they are today, armed to the teeth. Indeed, there is a plan pending before the Geneva conference, sponsored by the French government, which would prohibit the private manufacture of arms, except under state supervision, and would establish quotas for each country, covering the amount of war materials that it may manufacture or import each year.

Any such plan, however, is bound to encounter strenuous opposition. The countries that profit from the arms trade are apt to be reluctant to curtail it, and those that must purchase their materials abroad hesitate to restrict their means of defense, when other countries can manufacture their own. And finally there are the practical difficulties of controlling the manufacture and trade in materials for much of which a legitimate nonmilitary market also exists, as in the case of rifles and ammunition for use in sport. At the same time, without some effective method of restricting the private trade in arms between countries, as well as their manufacture, any international agreement to limit armaments would be virtually futile.

Once Upon a Time and Today.

Letters to the Editor.

Would Authorize Search of All Citizens to Capture Firearms—Imprisonment for Gun Toters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many suggestions have been made of late in the public press for the curbing of racketeering and gangster outrages. No one has yet, to my knowledge, advocated a method which has always seemed to me quite obvious, although, of course, it has its difficulties and objections.

The idea is briefly this: Impose a heavy penalty on the unauthorized carrying, or possession, of deadly weapons, and empower the police, or Federal agents, to search any person on suspicion.

This latter provision would, of course, take away personal rights guaranteed by the Constitution. It would be a kind of martial law, but is not the country now practically at war with the gangsters?

We are told the gangsters are, for the most part, well known to the police. If they were repeatedly searched, and fined or imprisoned when found in the possession of deadly weapons, there would soon be an end of bank robberies, hold-ups and most of the gangsters' activities. Then, too, they would hardly organize for kidnapping and racketeering without guns in their pockets or in their autos.

Law-abiding citizens would, I think, gladly submit to the inconvenience of black proper, if they could thus rid the country of conditions which at present make life a nightmare for many.

Boston Public Garden Gives List of Exotic Plants and Their Uses—Suggests Same Plan Here.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently a useful innovation has been made in Boston in the Public Garden. It is most instructive, as well as interesting, and it is attracting the attention of people of all ages. A stand, describing the various plants (more than 30 different varieties) in the enclosure and telling their economic uses has been placed near this garden. Each variety is numbered, and one has only to look at the writing on the stand to discover the name and native country of each plant. It is remarkable to see black pepper, ginger, calabash (the fruit shell of which is used for pipes), tobacco, aloë (the fibre of which is used in commerce), bowstring hemp (from the East Indies), peanuts, coconuts, bananas, cotton, sage palm, camphor tree (of China), date palm, pineapple, New Zealand flax (from which a substance like saccharine is extracted), vanilla plant (of Java), avocado, sugar cane, &c., flourishing in one garden.

Perhaps the park authorities in your city would like to have a similar garden to instruct school children as well as adults. There is an old Chinese proverb which tells us that it is far more beneficial to see anything than to merely hear about it. All garden lovers would be interested in this educational garden.

Baseball Fan Pleased With Nationals' Management and What It Has Accomplished.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with a great deal of interest the editorial in The Post of August 31, regarding the Washington Baseball Club. It was not only fair, but timely.

I have listened a great many times to those around me, during the past year, while I have attended the baseball games, who have criticized the club and its manager, Joe Cronin, for the very foolish trades which had been made at the beginning of the season, and all of that sort of thing which we hear in baseball crowds. Therefore, I was very glad to read your endorsement of the team as it stands today and as to what it has accomplished this year.

Bank Credit Must Be Available to Help Recovery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can not refrain from thanking you for your excellent editorial, "Banking Cooperation," published in your issue of August 25.

Business conditions in the District of Columbia at the moment can not improve unless the banks give accommodation; credit, as you stated, "must be given to help finance recovery."

Banking accommodation can alone stimulate and revive business to its normal state and thus be the means of restoring prosperity.

When the Tiger Has Eaten One Man, No Man Abroad at Night Is Safe.

By Robert Quillen.

IN a city in New Jersey some fiend is poisoning the food of chiropractors, hiding bombs under the hoods of their cars.

In an Illinois city, people who dare to testify before the grand jury are waylaid and killed.

In one community, farmers who try to market their milk are set upon and beaten by other farmers, their milk poured out and their trucks damaged.

In another, small ranchers are terrorized and their property destroyed because they refuse to sell their holdings to a rich land company.

In another, men striking for better wages and better living conditions are shot down by officers who serve their employers.

In many another the well-to-do or their children are kidnaped and held for ransom.

In countless places the weak and helpless are preyed upon and maltreated by the criminal and avaricious strong.

Never before in this Nation's history have peaceful and law-abiding citizens been so unprotected, so endangered or so heartlessly exploited and wronged.

Yet the agencies of justice and right are as few and as listless as they were when crime was comparatively rare.

Why does the law do less than its best to suppress evil and insure justice? Because there is no public clamor for vengeance.

And why is there no public clamor? Because the victims of wrong are comparatively few and those who do not share the hurt look on as heartless neutrals.

Who cares about the injustice done to ranchers two thousand miles away? Or the butchery of poor workmen in another State? Or the robbery of a rich man who can afford the loss?

At the most men and women say: "Too bad. These are evil times. Thank goodness, these dreadful things don't happen in our community."

But they will happen to all. Evils fatten on public indifference.

Every honorable citizen should be enraged by injustice, wherever it appears. Every decent man should be ready to take up arms against triumphant wrong, whether it is near or far.

To fight for your neighbor is to fight for yourself. If wrongs done to him are unpunished, other wrongs will be done to you.

No man can be sure of justice in a land where any injustice is tolerated. Is a mad dog no enemy of yours because it hasn't yet bitten your children?

Does the League Abdicate?

Minneapolis Journal.

Critics of the League of Nations doubtless are enjoying its aloofness from the rather perpetual crisis in Austria. Instead of intervening to defend the status quo against German sallies, Geneva is leaving it all to Mussolini. Instead of standing by Versailles as a League dominated by France might be expected to do, the Geneva diplomats are sitting tight.

Meanwhile, Italy and Austria have reached an accord on trade relations, turning the stream of commerce through Trieste and including special preferential treatment for Austrian imports into Italy. In effect, this betokens Italian defense of Austrian independence against the Anschluss or Austro-German scheme of Hitler.

Completion of this accord puts Mussolini in the position of European peace conservator, and what is more, the Italian dictator becomes the pinch hitter for the League.

Uncertainty About Inflation.

Minneapolis Journal.

Direct inflation doubtless would again mean great bull markets in stocks and the speculative commodities, and sharp rise in prices generally. That seems wholly inconsistent with the present efforts to keep prices from going too far above wages. But there is uncertainty. A business that would commit itself to a long time contract requiring use of raw material, unless it had such material in hand, and expecting to depend upon purchases in a fairly stable market, would be in no less dangerous position than the short trader in the stock market, in event that decision to throw the country into direct inflation were announced.

A Follow-Up Rule.

Maine's Basic Prohibition.

Boston Transcript.

Washington need stand in no worse position than some other States, with reference to liquor control, for she can easily solve that problem by getting her legislators together. She is not in half the mess in which Maine will find herself when 36 States have ratified the twenty-first amendment, if Maine is one of the 36, for Maine has a peculiar type of prohibition embedded in her fundamental law, the State constitution, and she can not get it out merely by electing delegates to a repeal convention.

Constitution of Maine has provided since January 7, 1905:

"The manufacture of intoxicating liquors, not including cider, and the sale and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors are and shall be forever prohibited. Except, however, that the sale and keeping for sale of such liquors for medicinal and mechanical purposes and the arts, and the sale and keeping for sale of cider may be permitted under such regulations as the Legislature may provide. The Legislature shall enact laws with suitable penalties for the manufacture of the manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors, with the exceptions herein specified."

Underground Forts.

New York Times.

France is bringing to completion the vast new system of fortifications along the German frontier in which every lesson of the World War is supposed to be embodied. The one big technical lesson of the war was that men, if they should ever again be exposed to the hideous test, must burrow for defense into the bosom of mother earth.

Trench and sub-trench and super-trench—this is the lesson. Attack in future wars is expected to be chiefly from the air, and defense must be subterranean. The new French barrier is an elaborate complex of subterranean forts, subterranean camps and barracks and communication trenches. Paris speaks of its new defenses with the utmost confidence.

SPIDER AS A WERMAKER.

Although the most symmetrical web ever made by a spider is not really perfect, according to human standards, scientists marvel at the accuracy with which angles and distances are "measured."

The spider starts her geometrical web with perimeter lines connecting objects around a space large enough for her purpose, according to Henry E. Ewing in the National Geographic Magazine. From these lines she suspends a few threads which converge at the center of the future web. Now begins the process of spacing the radii.

She attaches the end of a new radius at the center and runs along a spoke already laid down, spinning out the silk for the new one as she goes. When she reaches the perimeter line, she takes fixed number of steps along it and attaches the new thread. This process is repeated until all the desired radii are in place.

If the foundation lines should chance to form a wheel rim accurately circular, the distances between spokes would be equal; but, since the perimeter is usually an irregular quadrangle and never a circular, the spacing varies somewhat.

Railroads Set High Mark in Income Gains

Class One Lines Climb Out of Losses Into Net Profits.

The rise both in gross revenue and in net operating income of Class 1 railroads has been uninterrupted since February when the low point of the depression was reached both as regards gross revenues and net income.

It was not until May, however, that gross earnings began to show a slight increase—1.3 per cent—over receipts for May, 1932. In June gross income advanced 13 per cent over the preceding year, while the July gross amounted to $293,714,774, an increase of 24.8 per cent over the comparable figure for 1932. Meantime, net operating income, which in February and in March was $4.5 per cent and 67.7 per cent, respectively, below the corresponding months of 1932, rose from $10,501,755 in March to $19,041,489 in April—a figure closely approaching the net for the corresponding April. Each succeeding month has witnessed a rapid increase in the net operating income of the roads, with July net earnings totaling $64,309,929, an advance of 469.7 per cent over a year ago.

Income Gain Explained.
Expansion in net operating income during the last three or four months is attributed to the fact that contemporaneous increases in gross revenues took place at a time when operating expenses had been reduced by rigid economies.

Expenses remained virtually stationary during February, March and April, but May showed advance to $181,584,036 over the April figure of $173,296,168. June witnessed a further slight increase, while operating expenses for July reached an estimated total of $194,911,945, 2.7 per cent above the level of July, 1932. Outlays for maintenance are expected to continue to increase the next few months.

In spite of marked improvement in freight traffic operating revenues for the seven months to August 1 were 6 per cent below totals for 1932. Operating expenses for the same period were 12.3 per cent lower than last year, but net operating income for all the roads for the seven months was 79.3 per cent above the 1932 level.

Showing by Districts.
The showing by districts was not uniform, as Southern roads, which have been particularly hard hit, reported an average increase of three-tenths of 1 per cent in gross revenues for the seven months, while gross revenues of the Western roads were 7 per cent below last year. Those of Eastern roads were 6.9 per cent lower.

For July, four of the leading roads showing the best relative increases in gross revenues are the Great Northern, 52 per cent over July, 1932; the Norfolk & Western, 49.4 per cent; the Chesapeake & Ohio, 49.2 per cent, and the Southern, 47.1 per cent.

The Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific were the only ones among the 25 leaders to show decreases in gross from last July. The four roads among the leading carriers showing the greatest relative improvement in July net operating incomes are the New York Central, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Southern and the Washash.

Rise in Revenues.
The rise in gross revenues which has accompanied business expansion is reflected in weekly car-loading figures. Cumulative totals for the first 33 weeks of the year, including the week ended August 19, were slightly above figures for the same period in 1932, although car-loadings declined consistently each week until May 6, as compared with corresponding weeks last year.

Beginning with the week ended May 13, however, there has been a consistent increase in carloadings over the corresponding weeks of 1932.

The car-loadings figure for August 26, totaling 631,996 cars, although showing an increase of over 94,000 cars compared with a year ago, was slightly below the returns for the preceding week, amounting to 634,945 cars. The current recession is attributed to a slowing down in business, which has been reflected in declines in steel operations, lower coal production and reduced lumber shipments.

Interest of Public.
Public interest has been chiefly concentrated upon improvement in freight revenues, but smaller relative declines are being shown in passenger traffic in the case of certain roads. Some roads, in fact, report increases in passenger receipts as compared with a year ago.

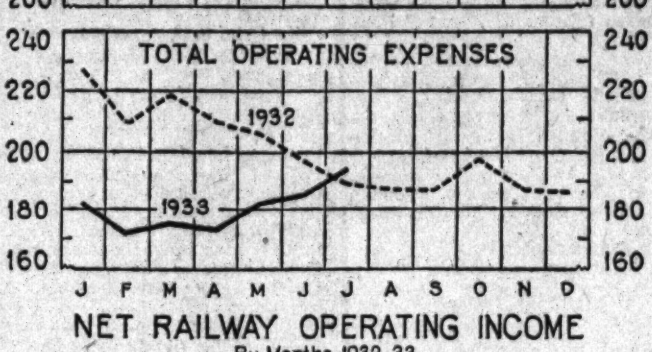

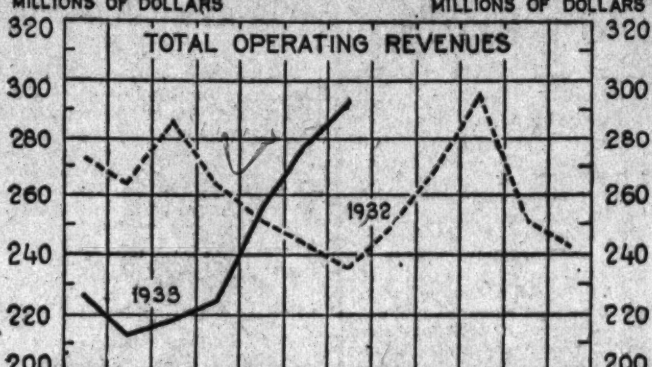

A few illustrations suffice to reveal the significant character of the change that has taken place. The B. & O., for example, was able to show a small increase in passenger revenues for July over the preceding year, whereas for the seven months to August 1, passenger revenues were $1,454,000 below the figures of 1932.

Although the New York Central reported a small increase of $177,000 for July, the relative improvement in its position is shown by the fact that decreases in passenger revenues for the first seven months amounted to $3,749,000. The Pennsylvania likewise reported a marked, though less conspicuous, shrinkage in the July deficiency. The I. C. C., as a result, in part at least, of the travel due to the World's Fair—a factor affecting all roads entering Chicago—reported an increase in passenger revenues for July and a decrease of $923,000 for the seven-month period. In fact, there is considerable evidence to indicate that passenger traffic has taken a turn for the better following the pronounced expansion of freight revenue which has accompanied the rising volume of business activity.

NRA Program Is Urged as Job Aid in Britain

Labor Leader Lauds Plan of Roosevelt to End Unemployment.

Brighton, Eng., Sept. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt's NRA program for recovery was held up to delegates to the trade unions congress here today as a model for the world to follow.

A. G. Walkden, president of the Congress, in his welcoming address praised Mr. Roosevelt's "unorthodox tackling of the depression." He said he felt the President had shown the way for the rest of the world, and added:

"President Roosevelt has taken decisive steps to show that economic individualism, both in theory and practice, is played out."

Says Capitalism Fighting.
"Capitalist interests," he said, "are now plainly fighting for their lives. I am not going to say that America has been converted over to Socialism—but I do say on the evidence available that America has turned to a policy which organized labor has long advocated as a solution of the present crisis."

Walkden said the NRA applies two sound trade union principles—shorter hours and higher wages—and furthermore requires employers fully to recognize the theory of trade unionism seeking the utmost cooperation among the unions and employers.

Will Urge U. S. Plan.
Walkden's speech was heard by delegates representing Great Britain's 3,000,000 trade unionists, here in the sixty-fifth annual congress. They are to be asked to act upon a resolution during their sessions this week urging Britain follow Roosevelt's methods in the effort to solve the unemployment problem.

A decrease in unemployment in Great Britain of 445,891 persons on August 21 of this year as compared with a year ago was reported in official statistics published today.

The total was given at 2,411,137 unemployed, a decrease also of 31,038 over the same date a month ago.

The notice was given Saturday, it was said, in anticipation of possible defeat in the independent's fight against article 33 of the proposed movie industry code which would prohibit showing of two feature pictures on one bill.

Labor-Industry Breach Now Up To Roosevelt

President Returns Today; Green Heralds Fight for New Grants.

President Roosevelt was to return to the White House today to take command of the administration's efforts toward ending a serious labor-industry cleavage, which, gaining impetus rapidly, arose over Labor Day to challenge the national recovery campaign.

The ominous signs:
1. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking at Akron, the stronghold of the open-shop rubber industry, demanded still shorter working hours than the codes provide in order to absorb the unemployed. He promised to take to the courts employers who violate the collective bargaining provisions of the codes.

2. The automobile code, scheduled to become effective today, finds Henry Ford still silent as to whether he will jump on the band wagon. Important, too, in light of developments, is the fact that the motor code stipulates a right to hire or fire employees without regard to union affiliations—a feature which is frowned upon by labor spokesmen as being recognition of the open shop.

3. Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, called upon his powerful membership to insist upon similar language in all codes.

Green Lashes Back.
Green, aroused by Harriman's overtures, branded them as "the traditional attitude" of the Chamber of Commerce and of industry, declared the recovery act gives labor the right to organize and asserted "Mr. Harriman, as a good citizen, should conform to the law of the land."

Meanwhile, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, was so disturbed he was considering a plan to ask Attorney General Cummings for an interpretation of the recovery law in an effort to settle the unionism issue.

At Chicago, in a Labor Day speech, Johnson cautioned the public that success of the recovery drive depended upon the public, but refused to make claims as to the results in day to the ground. "It is too early to make a random test," he said, "and because figures are not available. However, he added, 'we shall be on the way out of the depression before the snow flies.' He said he was planning a buyers' campaign about September 20."

Labor Exhorted to Fight.
While he was drawing cheers from Chicagoans, though, Green, in Akron, was lashing his union followers into line for the open shop fight.

"The NRA has opened the door of opportunity for industry and labor," he said, "in my opinion, the time has arrived when industrial management should stop fighting the organization of labor and in the spirit and letter of the NRA give it an opportunity to collectively cooperate in making real, vital and beneficial, all the provisions of the NRA."

He was supported by Donald Richberg, general counsel for the NRA, who, in Ottumwa, Iowa, asserted "labor organizations are even more necessary today than they ever were."

U. S. to Boost Tobacco Price If Crop Is Cut

Aid Pledged Southerners in Return for Quick Reduction Action.

(Associated Press.)
A virtual promise of higher prices for this year's crop of flue-cured tobacco was made yesterday by Farm Administration officials, provided growers will join in a whirlwind crop reduction campaign.

In order to insure promise of reduction in a week or two, officials last night were drafting a blanket agreement to slash production, for presentation to farmers within a few days.

An acreage reduction up to 30 per cent was suggested at a meeting between farm administrators and delegates from the South yesterday.

Chester C. Davis, Farm Administration director of production, and J. B. Hutson, head of the tobacco section, indicated the Government would either go on the market and buy surplus tobacco or would furnish funds for such purchases.

At a meeting between representatives of growers, warehousemen and State officials from the Carolinas and Virginia a series of resolutions were drafted. Among these were proposals for Government purchase to guarantee a parity price to the farmers.

Pinchot Lauds Miners' Truce

Governor Says Fight for Bargaining Saved Recovery.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 4 (AP).—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today told western Pennsylvania soft coal miners that their acceptance of the truce in last month's violent strike "saved the entire national recovery program."

In an address before a Labor Day mass meeting near the scene of outbreaks in which one striker was killed and a score wounded, the governor said the miners performed "a great patriotic service for the Nation through restraint and good sense."

Last week's agreement to give the workers "the undisputed right of collective bargaining," Pinchot referred to as "the best thing that has ever happened to the miners and to the entire bituminous mining industry in America."

"The right for which you and I must fight together, and win together, is against the grasping money lords," Pinchot asserted. "Your fight is with the Mellons, the Morgans, the Hoovers, the Reeds and the rest of the money barons who have been running these United States until 1932, when Democrats and Progressive Republicans united to sweep the money changers out of the temple."

NRA Renews Plan to Solve Coal Solution

Attempt to End Deadlock Over Union Contracts Set for Today.

(Associated Press.)
President Roosevelt's recovery forces will start a new attempt today to solve problems blocking entry of bituminous coal into the ranks of Blue Eagle industries.

Resumption of conferences on union labor contracts for the Appalachian fields will be the first step. Unable to break the deadlock between operators and heads of the United Mine Workers of America on inclusion of provisions for an open shop and reduction of union dues from miners pay, before the holiday, Gen. Johnson ordered opposing groups to meet again in his office at 2 p. m. today.

Disputed Point Deadlock

Operators and miners were understood to have agreed upon most of the other points. Neither side has manifested any indication of giving way.

Gen. Johnson is eager to see fulfillment of the agreement to place the Appalachian mines under union contract before he resumes work on the code of competition for the entire industry. Appalachian fields turn out nearly three-fourths of the Nation's coal, and for the most part have been nonunion.

He feels the differences between the Appalachian operators and the union have been the principal stumbling block in the way of a code's completion. Once it is removed, Gen. Johnson has indicated belief that swinging the entire industry into line would be a comparatively simple task.

Strenuous Objections Foreseen

On the other hand, Alabama and western Kentucky operators have evidenced opposition to plans which would fail to assure an open shop. The administration has not yet disclosed what minimum wage scales it will propose for those areas. If they are not considerably lower than the $4.20 wage agreed to for southern West Virginia and western Kentucky, Alabama and western Kentucky operators expect to raise strenuous objections to the code.

President Roosevelt is anxious to have Recovery Administration's decks cleared of codes for major industries at the earliest possible moment.

Holidays Over, Hostesses Returning to Washington

Mrs. Roosevelt Back at White House; Debuchis to Arrive Tonight; Other Diplomats and Families Coming Back From Vacations.

LABOR DAY marks what might be called the official end of holiday-making for Washington society.

With President and Mrs. Roosevelt again in the White House, Cabinet hostesses in town intent on opening their homes for the season and the diplomats on route to Washington from their far-flung vacation haunts, society will be spelled with a big "S" from now on.

Practically the only exception to this general rule is in the congressional circles, which will be delayed in coming to Washington this season because of the later opening of Congress. Due to the passage of the twentieth amendment at the last session, Congress will reopen in January instead of the first Monday in December.

Mrs. Roosevelt returned to the White House late last evening from Hyde Park. She will hold her press conference tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., accompanied by Mr. George Whitney, Jr., Mr. Charles Symington and Mr. Drexel Paul, Jr., will arrive in New York this week aboard the Manhattan.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, who are sojourning at Saratoga, N. Y., were among those who attended the annual invitation motorboat regatta there Sunday.

Radio Waves and Ripples

Four personalities you hear each week. The Sherlock-looking gentleman is, of course, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, N. B. C.'s tune detective, who looks up the family tree of a popular tune and traces its ancestry through a symphony, a drinking song, a church hymn, an opera and a Turkish lullaby. The three girls are the Three Maids, who with a Mike, sing to you from WJSV. Local ladies, mind you, and doing right well.

A MODEST young man from Flint, Mich., Warren Dues, 23, given a medal yesterday as the greatest living fire hero, will be interviewed over the NBC network at 12:45 today.

Young Dues was brought to Washington as the guest of honor for the National Firemen's Labor Day parade. Two years ago he saved the lives of seven children in a Flint fire. He was severely burned while performing this outstanding feat of heroism and almost died.

An account from him of the rescue will be given radio listeners today.

Plain talk on the defensive strength of the United States Navy will be NBCed tomorrow by Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy, in his first radio address, or first public speech since taking office.

This is a feature of the seventh annual dinner of the National Exchange Clubs of Milwaukee. Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, will also be heard on the program, giving a few more words to that present greatest of all subjects—the NRA.

That thrilling tale of our youth, "Treasure Island," one of the ever-living works of Robert Louis Stevenson, goes on the air Thursday night, September 14 (NBC). It's the first of a series of celebrated children's classics. Following it will be dramatizations of "Oliver Twist," "The Three Musketeers," "King Arthur and His Knights" and "Robin Hood." This is really one of the most significant series of children's programs. NBC is going after it with all it can give, getting together fine sea chanteys, accomplished actors and good orchestral music. John S. Young, announcer, will tell of the closing of the Alpha Chi Rho convention Saturday. Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan opera singer, also a member, will sing. Guernsey Cross, former secretary of the President, while he was governor, is toastmaster.

Playing for the Breaks.

Certain types of players believe that Slams should never be bid unless the odds are greatly in favor of their being made; other players believe that they should be bid on the slightest of excuses even if the odds are definitely against their fulfillment. Personally, I believe both these schools to be incorrect. A vulnerable Slam should be bid on only a 50-per-cent chance, while a nonvulnerable Slam requires only a little more than an even chance. Of course, the most important feature of all is the ability to play difficult hands correctly. The hand given below was played in the semifinals of the recent team-of-four event at Asbury Park. Mr. Edward Hymes, Jr., sat South and Mr. Louis H. Watson sat North. These players unquestionably overbid the hand but Mr. Hymes was able to make up for this fault on the play.

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

Mr. Watson.

The bidding:

South West North East

1♥ Pass 1♠ Pass

2♠ Pass 3♥ Pass

3♠ Pass 4♦ Pass

4NT Pass 5NT Pass

The bidding was all right up to North's bid of four diamonds. Having bid three hearts already, the proper bid at this point was four hearts. However, Mr. Watson apparently felt that he had not yet divulged his entire strength. In view of this unusual cue bid Mr. Hymes was probably justified in his Slam try, and the rest of the bidding followed normal lines.

Now Comes Lipstick to Stay There

It's Indelible, in a Dainty Case; "Bath Delight" Intrigues Shopper.

By Ruth Anne Davis
The two essentials for a dainty case are comfortable slippers and an indelible lipstick. The first item is easy. Leave that to the shoe stores.

But as for the second, probably the most important after all, discretion being the better part of valor, you'll be interested in the new guaranteed, kiss-proof—that is, indelible lipstick recently put on sale at a downtown store. It comes in a black and white case, small enough to fit the daintiest evening bag as few lipsticks ever do. Its conservative color scheme will be appropriate for any frock in your wardrobe.

From the mountains of north Georgia come the cotton homespun candlewick spreads like those so popular among our grandmothers and great-grandmothers those many years ago. These are made by people who still retain the art of designing these spreads just as it was done a century ago. You will find the simple patterns of the little thread balls as interesting as they are becoming to your colonial bed. As for color, you have a choice of blue, green, white, yellow and rose. Price $1.55.

When winter comes and you want a tall vase to hold your evergreens, look as far and wide as you like, but you won't find anything more ideally suited to such a purpose than an old Dutch pickle jar vase. A store on Connecticut avenue is selling them for $3. If you know your glassware, you'll see right off these are very accurate reproductions of the genuine old Dutch pickle jars. And, like the originals, they come in green only.

The "Bath Delight," as the store has named it, makes for a bath delightful. It comprises so many things in one that as a whole it must be considered as an extraordinary bargain. First of all, the price is well within reason. Second, the glass box part of it may serve many purposes besides its primary one of holding some sweet-scented bath powder. Third, the magnifying mirror top enables you to so thoroughly scrutinize your face that no blemish may pass unnoticed. And, don't forget, if you're up on your beauty secrets, a blemish noticed is a blemish cured.

If you believe that children should be seen and not heard you should shop for them accordingly and give them something that will so occupy their childish minds that the danger of uproars is avoided. On the other hand, if you don't think seeing them is sufficient, you should shop for them accordingly and give them something to talk sensibly about. The answer to both these beliefs is to be found in an E street novelty shop. That is, providing the child in mind is neither a boy, nor tomboyish. Otherwise she'll be tickled to death with one of the doll baby boxes which comes with complete equipment. It includes a little baby doll and everything that doll is likely to need—a small hot water bottle, soap box, miniature cake of soap, a sponge and wash cloth. The price is 49 cents.

Next time there's extra company and you have to sleep in the tub (it has been done, you know) you'll be much more comfortable than you were the last time, thanks to the new rubber head sponge rests on sale in a downtown store. The designer undoubtedly had in mind making your bath one of those leisurely, restful affairs where you could recline with all the luxury of a mermaid. You can buy these in green and rose, rust and rose, tan and green, for 50 cents.

It's a handy little contraption, this little spoon and bottle opener combination. You know how it is, a little stirring up is good for most things, but so often one is caught short with a bottle opener and no spoon. With this you'll be prepared. It's double-plated and won't rust.

There's nothing more attractive on Milady's dressing table than a dainty perfume bottle and there's nothing handier for traveling than one that's guaranteed not to spill. Some of those at special prices in a downtown department store will meet both needs. They come in crystal, rose and green carved glass. Price, 85 cents.

If you're going in for automatic refrigeration, you should go in for it in a big way. Buy the most modern, the most convenient and the one which answers not one purpose but many. With this in mind, by all means see the automatic refrigerator in a G street store. It is so arranged that even when frost is being melted from the cooling unit, food preservation temperatures are maintained. It has four distinct temperature zones, each independent of the others.

What's in Fashion? Berets Play New Tricks To be Smartly Individual

Directed by Amos Parrish.

Information as to where fashions of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, Washington Post, on request.

Don't get the wrong idea about berets. You will see lots of them. But that doesn't mean that women will look like an army with berets for official headgear. Absolutely not. For they're different and individual, after the newest fashion.

Look at the three sketched and be convinced. One woman could have all three of those in her wardrobe, as a matter of fact, and not feel that she had any hats alike.

You might not even take the one in the center of the sketch for a beret at all—it's so unusually manipulated and disguised with that visor brim. One of the most youthful of all, dipping over the right eye in peekaboo fashion. The left is stitched to make it have an interesting, pebbly surface. And for contrast to that surface . . . a sleek circle satin ribbon.

Hard to Wear.

The beret sketched at the bottom is even more original. Harder to wear, too, unless you have just the right shaped head and features. Its slant is oriental, with a smooth front that hints of a coolie hat. Strange, isn't it, how often the peasant fashions of one country can become the most sophisticated of another? A silver and jade pagoda pin is in keeping with the Chinese spirit.

Such berets as this one need smoother, more formal materials, too. Soileil, soft felt, close-cropped velours or antelope.

Full Beret.

That top beret is the most adaptable. Full, low-drawn front, high slanting back. . . pull it here, pinch it there and make it your very own. And it can be dressy or informal, according to the material you choose it in (something which goes for nearly all berets). In velvet or antelope, or duvetyne, it goes with dressy clothes. And in felt or wool you'll like it with your hairy woollens.

So, except for the fact that they dip over the right eye and rise

The Family Marketer

Blueberries Are Here and What a Job It Was to Get Them.

THE boxes of blueberries on the market are merely blueberries to most of the marketers, but the dealer who stands by and offers his wares knows the story back of them.

At this time of the season, they grow in sparse quantities. They must be gathered from the swamps by men who wade through the murky waters in high rubber boots. You will, perhaps, notice a certain sweetness in their flavor characteristic of swamp berries of any kind. But it isn't always the market that caters to the marketer. For instance, California figs are selling for six for 25 cents. At the mention of such a price one would naturally visualize figs of mammoth proportions, but, as a matter of fact, these are only ordinary size, no sweeter, no tastier than those from around Norfolk selling for 25 cents a quart.

Three Kinds of Plums.

In the fruit line, you have a choice of three kinds of excellent plums, as different as twins often are. One of them, the green gage plum, is selling at two quarts for 25 cents. The Damsen plums are 15 cents a quart. Don't forget these are the preserving plums. Both are local. The Kelsy plums, 50 cents a basket, are here from California. There'll be 15 plums in your basket, so don't forget to check up. These are too good to preserve. Eat them "as is."

If you like strawberries, you're apprehensive of frost, because the few local berries now on hand will be with us only until they are nipped by the first cold spell. If you're a connoisseur of strawberries, you probably aren't particularly interested in those on the market today. They give the impression of having tried awful hard to be straw-

Sweet Oil Halts Furniture Stain

If an alcoholic mixture should by unhappy chance be upset on your polished furniture, prompt action with sweet oil can save the day. Otherwise, the alcohol will dissolve the shellac and leave an ugly stain which can only be disguised by complete refinishing.

Heat spots on furniture will disappear if rubbed in linseed oil and polished. When ink is spilled, use a blotter to absorb the surplus, then rub with a turpentine cloth and polish until dry.

New Waterford, S. C. (AP)—Napoleon Auction and his bride, Constance, are something more than man and wife. While they were being married at one church, another wedding was going on a short distance away. It united Napoleon's mother, Mrs. Mary Auction, with Constance's father, Peter P. Chaisson.

To Clean Tea Pot

Pots used for brewing tea or coffee should, when cleaned, be rinsed first with cold water, then washed in hot water, scalded, dried and left open.

berries, but having stopped a little short of their goal. Buy them if you like for 35 cents a quart.

Lettuce Hard and Green.

For the first time in several days you can say the lettuce is hard and green. The lettuce on the market today does seem to be the best we've encountered for some time. It's selling for 10 and 15 cents a head.

For something as hardheaded as cabbage, it has the most amazing way of changing its mind. One day it will be not so firm and priced exceedingly low. Next day it will be in fine condition and sell for eight cents. Today you can buy it at two pounds for seven cents. Draw your own conclusions. And don't forget, generalities in regards to vegetables must be held open for exceptions. MORE

Potatoes Drop.

Most people would say off-hand that there's nothing interesting in potatoes. Ordinarily the Marketer might agree. But right now, they're one of the most interesting vegetables in the country.

It was generally assumed that the high price they were bringing would remain as it was until the new crop. But potatoes have taken the dealers by surprise and dropped as much as 50 cents in the wholesale trade. This is noticeable in the retail market, where they're now selling five pounds for 15 cents.

Invites 'Em All

Shiny Noses Reflect Only Lack of Care

Subdued Finish the Thing; Let Hair Carry Gloss Instead of Face.

Shiny noses never have been the beauty standard, at least not as far back as we can remember. In fact, the least hint of shine on the nose is enough to cause a woman no end of woe. Out goes the puff and on goes the powder. Layer upon layer. Not that that's the cure-all. Far from it. In no time the nose is at it again—shining away. Worse yet, in the case of excessively oily skin the excess oil mixing with powder and surface dust forms a pasty mass and blackheads soon set in.

The first thing, then, is to get at the cause of the shine. Stop eating an excess of fatty foods, rich pastries, desserts, starches and sweets. Try more fruits and vegetables. And drink plenty of water. Put a finishing or "no shine" lotion on the skin before powder. And search about for a good quality powder that will cling softly without giving that flour-barrel look. That smooth, soft, dull finish of face is the new beauty vogue.

The wise woman plays up to the gleaming highlights in her hairy beauty, copper tints, blue-black beauty; whatever the color, it's the sheen and lustre and those dancing lights that are important. Brushing, proper shampooing, rinses are all summoned to nurse those highlights, enhance them, call forth every gleam and glint. Every healthy head of hair has them. Every groomed, cared-for head shows them off to advantage.

And it's the contrast between dull finish of face and highlighting of hair that makes the modern picture so beautiful and so interesting.

By a dull face finish we do not mean an off-color, lifeless, sallow or sluggish looking skin. It is a groomed, toned-down and altogether lovely look, that facial finish which makes the modern picture so beautiful and so interesting.

Be careful when you're in a hurry that you don't grab a brown pocketbook instead of a black one. The entire effect will be destroyed by the use of these a few minutes each day will remove the dust of toil and lengthen the wear of your shoes.

Before you leave your dressing table, be sure your powder is on smoothly and your lipstick isn't smeared around the edges. See that your collar and cuffs are clean and straight and your hair neat and arranged becomingly. The present vogue for curls makes it difficult to keep a coiffure in order, but if necessary, sacrifice the ringlets for tidiness.

Insight
By Katherine W. Smith.
I was rushing from the office
On a wet and stormy night.
My clothes were soaked and dripping.
I was moaning of my plight.
And I met a poet walking
Through the mud; the thunder's
Was music to his ears because
The stars danced through his soul.

Well-Groomed Look an Asset

Just a Little Care Increases Style and Poise.

That well-ground look that singles a woman out from her less careful sisters may be had at the expense of little time or money.

Smooth hair, clean shoes and well-cared-for nails are essential to neat appearance. Milady's gowns need not come from Fifth avenue, nor her hats from Paris. A little thought in the selection of her wardrobe and a little more in connection with her grooming will give her the poised assurance that she is dressed becomingly.

Supply your dressing table with a good mirror and light. Include among your cosmetics a rouge and lipstick that will match your coloring and a nail polish that will blend with your costumes.

A small bottle of brilliantine will keep your hair neat and restore dulled luster. Keep a tube of shoe polish and a clothes brush in your closet. The use of these a few minutes each day will remove the dust of toil and lengthen the wear of your shoes.

Before you leave your dressing table, be sure your powder is on smoothly and your lipstick isn't smeared around the edges. Release of Child Worker Hailed by Miss Lenroot

Declares New Deal, Law of Economics Spells End of Thralldom.

"Labor Day this year had a special significance for us," gratefully declared Katherine S. Lenroot, capable acting chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

She was discussing the child labor provisions of the President's reemployment program, which became effective this month.

"We feel what President Roosevelt so aptly expressed in commenting on the cotton textile code regulating employment of child labor: 'This ancient atrocity went out in a day.'"

Although for 20 years the Children's Bureau has been working toward this day, it can not in truth claim large credit for the change for the better which this month inaugurates. While it has been our part to focus, coordinate and stimulate action, and legislation accompanying permanent minimum child labor standards, the laws of economics in the last analysis proved our ablest ally in child protection.

Child Labor Ban Imperative.

"New agreements and codes prohibiting the employment of children under the age of 16 years were made imperative by inexorable natural law finally asserting itself. Child labor has now been recognized as injurious to the economic life of the Nation, as well as to the intelligence and vigor of its citizenship."

Miss Lenroot, daughter of the former senator from Wisconsin, gazed thoughtfully out the window of her spacious, cream-walled, blue carpeted, picture-hung office, in the Department of Labor building, Seventh and F streets northwest.

"Just how many children will be affected, no one can say. When the 1930 census was made, 197,621 young people between the ages of 10 and 15 years were gainfully occupied in industries, other than agriculture."

Still Prevalent on Farms.

"It is to be noted that the gains in child protection have been made chiefly in manufacturing and mercantile employments. They do not apply to the very large number of children employed in agriculture. Some forms of industrialized agriculture are dependent upon child labor to a large extent. It is to be hoped that a way may be found to bring children in these industries within the field of our national policy."

"With the release of children from industry, a challenge is presented to school authorities and to citizens to make the President's reemployment agreement spell opportunity, not idleness, for these helpless fledgling citizens, whom we cherish as our dearest possessions and our hopes for the future."

"With school budgets and school resources being drastically curtailed, we are confronted with the serious problem of so planning our community life and our financial budgets as to make these children's hard-won leisure productive rather than destructive."

Work For U. S. Amendment.

In view of the fact that the President's reemployment agreement, devised to make work for adults through removal of child labor from industry, is effective for a two-year period only, the Children's Bureau will continue to work

More extensive regulations governing the welfare of women workers by State governments is indicated by a report of labor legislation during the six-month period ended July 30, prepared by the Federal Women's Bureau under the direction of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

New labor laws for women, or amendments to existing laws, were passed by at least 16 State legislatures, the bureau reports, with seven States setting machinery for creation of minimum wages.

Six of these States, New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Ohio and Illinois, passed laws similar in all essential points, patterning them after the model law advocated by the National Consumers League. While the seventh, Utah, passed a bill modeled after the one in effect in California.

Two amendments to the existing Massachusetts law governing minimum wages for women were passed both making the law more effective and more easily enforced. A minimum wage bill failed of passage in Rhode Island, but a legislative committee was set up to investigate working conditions and devise a bill for presentation to the next legislature.

Changes in maximum hour laws for women were effected in six States. A legal maximum of eight hours per day and 48 hours per week was created in New Mexico and Wyoming for women workers; while Connecticut, Minnesota, North Carolina and Texas made various changes in existing statutes.

Frocks Flaunt Their Frills Near Hemline

Capes Accent Shoulders and Fabrics Are Rich and Heavy.

Paris, Sept. 4 (AP).—Capes, long and short, on sports clothes and street clothes, have returned to the 1934 winter mode. From brief waist-length models to hip-length designs they appear in wools and flat furs.

"Spinach" is the name of one striking cape costume which Mirande displays for sports wear. It combines a green ribbed-wool skirt with a brick-colored blouse and a hip-length green cape, with button-trimmed tabs accenting the shoulder line. Shorter capes appear with street frocks.

A brown wool dress is accompanied by a little waist-length cape, made of the same fabric and finished with brick wool applications, to wear on cool days.

Both shoulders and hems are accentuated on the slender frocks displayed by Mirande for daytime and evening wear. Shoulder lines hold the hemline from running along the top of

Closed Bank of Weston Will Distribute Dividend

Weston, W. Va., Sept. 4 (Spl.).—It was announced this morning that on September 15 a 10 per cent dividend would be paid to the depositors of the closed Citizens Bank of Weston.

The bank has been closed since last October. The amount to be paid is $200,000.

Pacific Coast May Recapture Flour Markets of Orient

New York, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—Prospects of recapturing the Oriental flour markets from Canada, Australia and Japan are foreseen by Pacific Coast wheat farmers and millers, according to a comment on western business by the Bank of America. Early revival of the lucrative trade with trans-Pacific countries is foreshadowed by agreements between the benefit of international wheat conferences, the institution points out.

A code submitted to Washington last week by Pacific Coast wheat and milling interests will solve, if accepted, the problem of an estimated 40,000,000 bushel surplus of wheat stored in far Western warehouses, sponsors of the code predict.

The code is said to provide for bounties working to the benefit of both exporters and growers. In both cases the bounty is designed to represent the difference between the Chicago market level and the foreign selling level necessitated in meeting competition.

Up until its decline in 1929, the trans-Pacific movement of flour

Industry Pause Is Regarded as New Planning

Period of Preparation Seen as Hope for Wider Fall Activity.

New York, Sept. 4 (Spl.).—After the abrupt increases for four consecutive months in the aggregate industrial activity of the country, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., the moderate recession now current can be viewed as a period of preparation for fresh gains, as soon as the strength of the new consumer buying power will have been tested in the early months of the fall season.

Operations in many factories continue near the peak schedules of the summer, as orders booked are sufficient to extend the present rate well into October.

The decline in new orders in some divisions has been attributed chiefly to the uncertainties regarding the prices that are to prevail under the various industrial codes, as many manufacturers have yet to issue their revised lists.

Gains in Employment

Gains in employment continue to be announced by manufacturers of shoes, hosiery, textiles, electrical equipment and breweries. There also has been more employment in the metal trades, with reported increases in the number of inquiries for heavy machinery.

An outstanding proof of the gain in consumer buying power since spring is present in the sweeping gains made in the sales of electrical refrigerating units this summer.

Manufacturers stepped up production from week to week as soon as the season opened, with sales rising 300 to 400 per cent above last year's total and nearly 50 per cent above the good record of 1931.

Auto Sales Increase

Even in the automobile trade, where the cash deposit is larger than at any time since 1929, sales have increased. The purchase of household items, even when the deferred purchasing plan is used, sales have increased contrary to all seasonal trends and indications now point to a third-quarter output which will at least equal and perhaps exceed that of the second.

There has been a steady advance in the operations of the electrical equipment industry during the last two months and demand has spread to all kinds of electrical accessories, heavy machinery and complete installations. Orders for radio equipment have been the largest export in the last two years.

The greater activity has resulted in the employment of hundreds of men and women at wages higher than last year's scale. The radio industry is in a better position than at any time since 1929, having been helped by the wide popularity of automobile radios this summer and the wider sale of the portable sets.

Tobacco Men Meet to Seek Higher Prices

(Associated Press.)

Delegations of tobacco growers and warehousemen met yesterday with representatives of the Farm Adjustment Administration to present plans for increasing future tobacco prices in North and South Carolina and other States.

The delegation included Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus and other representatives from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia. After a meeting session they assembled in committees to draw plans for presentation to J. B. Hutson, chief of the Farm Administration's tobacco section, and Chester O. Davis, director of production.

Tobacco markets are closed now in North and South Carolina. Gov. Ehringhaus indicated yesterday that they would not reopen in his State until there was an assurance of better prices.

Gov. Ibra C. Blackwood of South Carolina was represented by Ashton H. Williams, and Gov. John C. B. Ehringhaus of Virginia, by George W. Koerner, State commissioner of agriculture.

Delegation members said they planned to see President Roosevelt if necessary in an effort to bring action to raise the price of future tobacco to the growers. Representative Fox of North Carolina told the tobacco men they would arrange a meeting with the President if they desired and that he was certain the Chief Executive would give them a "sympathetic hearing."

The bank has been closed since last October. The amount to be paid is $200,000.

Up until its decline in 1929, the trans-Pacific movement of flour alone provided the shipping lines with an annual cargo of approximately 570,000 tons. Last year this business equaled only half this amount and for the first six months of this year but 34,300 tons were reported. Expectations of a bounty and a resulting processing tax lead far Western milling and wheat interests to predict the recapturing of this lucrative trade.

Gold in South Africa Reacts on Warnings

Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, Sept. 4 (AP).—The gold market has undergone an amazing reaction in response to warnings from London against gambling on a further increase in the price of the metal.

The market tone was lifeless to day, prices were below recent levels and speculators were numerous. The market was awaiting publication of August profits which will be calculated on the basis of 125 shillings per ounce of gold.

Trend of Stocks Seen Rising on Longer Pull

Short-Term Reactions in Securities and Commodities Considered of Passing and Minor Importance; Increasing Demand Is Expected.

New York, Sept. 4 (Standard Statistics).—Viewed from the longer term perspective, short term reactions in the security and commodity markets, and even short term reactions and fluctuations in business confidence, are of passing and minor significance. The longer term trend of common stock values is upward.

It is the purpose of this analysis to develop a common-sense basis for the appraisal of probable common stock values over a period of time—say over the next 12 to 18 months.

A common stock certificate represents a fractional ownership in a business enterprise. The power to produce an average income sufficient to give a fair return on the investment, plus some compensation for the risk involved, is the primary function of business enterprise, and concurrently, the primary function giving value to common stocks.

Opportunity for Capital

Another function of business is that it offers the opportunity for capital gain in addition to income return. A third function is that it offers a haven for capital at times when it seems more desirable to employ money in business than to keep it elsewhere.

By Inaugural Day of this year our American economy had reached a stage which may quite properly be described as a condition of national bankruptcy. There are two months of treatment which may be applied to such a cataclysmic situation.

The popular names of these methods are deflation and inflation. The logical end of deflation is not merely a condition of national bankruptcy, such as we had a few months ago, but actual and legal bankruptcy. The creditors take over the solvers' assets, and either liquidate them for whatever they will bring, or "squeeze enough water" out of the capitalization of these assets to reestablish their earning power.

Bank Policy Reviewed

When the Roosevelt administration took the reins of government on March 4, its first important act was to close officially all the banks in the country, and to allow to reopen only those which could obtain a license to resume. This was, per se, a deflationary policy.

But by the act of inflation it had become evident that the administration for its major policy had chosen the other option; that it was not going to allow the major deflation of our economic establishment to continue; that it was, in a word, reaping the fruits of inflation, rather than of deflation.

To make inflation effective, the demands for goods must expand. Quite obviously, demand for goods will automatically increase if, by the act of economics, the national income is increased. The demand for goods may be increased by a growing sense of security of savings. (This is the antithesis of a levy upon savings, although it would be possible at one and the same time to be levying and saving.)

But the savings of one class and the building of a protective roof over the savings of another class.

Money and Tangibles

Current demand for goods will assuredly increase if there develops the promise, or even the reasonable prospect, that the value of money, as expressed in terms of goods, is going to diminish. If there is the prospect that the intrinsic value of money is going to decline, the natural response on the part of the average man is the will to possess more goods.

If the average man is convinced that a given time goods are going to greatly appreciate in terms of money, and if he seeks to protect his own interests under these circumstances, he has two options:

First, he may purchase goods which he never expects to see, paying down in cash a price for goods which he expects to see appreciate in terms of money, and if he seeks to protect his own interests under these circumstances, he has two options:

The Valuable Clerk.

I WENT to Jimson's clothing store to buy myself a suit, for well I knew the rags I wore were far from looking cute. I hoped to look around a while from interference free, and suit myself in hue and style, but that was not to be. A cordial clerk came bustling up, the smoothest clerk I'd seen since Hector was a little pup upon the village green. He led me here, he led me there, so busily employed, he knew just what I ought to wear, and what I should avoid. He showed a suit with yellow stripes as something good to see; he blithely cried, "This layout swipes the whole blamed Christmas tree." He showed a suit with gorgeous checks; "It's something fine and neat, and all the girls will sprain their necks to see you on the street." He didn't seem to note my age, my three score years and ten, but showed such duds as are the rage with kids and circus men. And all the time he talked a streak in glad and joyous strain, till I was overwhelmed and weak, and filled with grief and pain. He talked an hour and didn't sell his garments, span and spick; he drove me out, but meant so well it was no use to kick. The salesman who is truly wise will make no breaks like these; he'll use with acumen, his eyes, and hand out goods that please.

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

New York-Trivial and personal notes plucked off a New Yorker's cuff.

In Bedford square, Brooklyn, is a fountain with an extremely large base, the inside of which is curved. When it is dry the neighborhood youngsters ride around in it on their bicycles. Makes a marvelous velodrome.

A certain columnist, dizzier than a head waiter on a big night, was ambulating out of a Broadway tavern. As he emerged to the sidewalk, he was astounded to see Emily Vanderbilt Davies strolling by with two dogs on leashes. One was an English shepherd, big as a grizzly bear, and the other a pocket edition dachshund. The scribbler wheeled and fled back into the coffee shoppe.

Buncombe County, N. C., is probably the only one in the United States, with native sons in all branches of national Congress and State Legislature. They are United States Senator R. R. Reynolds, Representative Zebulon Weaver, State Senator Blackstock and State Representative W. A. Sullivan.

Patricia Bowman, danseuse, likes rain, six-day bicycle racing and spinach, but she loathes turnips and the color of brown.

Three for One.

Joe Cook, as you probably know, is an extremely versatile fellow. Besides being a stellar comedian he is an expert sharpshooter, juggler, tight-rope walker, acrobat, tumbler, dancer and musician. Just a one-man show, and it often has bothered his managers as to what they would do if Joe were unable to perform some night.

The problem was almost solved the other afternoon when three fellows, triplets, appeared with the proposition that they be Cook's understudies. The plan was for one of them to learn tight-rope walking, the other juggling, and so on. Joe's talents were to be divided among the three so the task wouldn't be so difficult.

"Just Off the Boat."

One of the busiest fleets around the Manhattan waterfront is composed of the customs guard river patrol boats. The seagoing police take care of dock thieves and similar criminals, but the customs boys are on the alert for smugglers.

The smugglers employ high-powered speed boats. They work with confederates on the transatlantic liners. After the liner docks, the smugglers await an opportunity to drift up into the same berth. Their confederate on board drops the contraband through a porthole or over the side and those waiting in the small boat below pick it up and speed away.

So alert is the customs patrol, however, that it has become an extremely risky business.

How to Keep Well

Blood Sugar and Wellbeing.

BY DR. W. A. EVANS.
MOST of us are pretty well informed about diabetes. We know there are several conditions that cause glycosuria and go by the loose name, diabetes, while these disorders vary in that the body does not use all the sugar offered the tissues. The blood contains more than the normal amount of sugar.

We are just learning that there is another group due to the opposite condition. The common characteristic is that the tissues are not supplied as much sugar as they need—the blood sugar is too low.

It was Dr. Seale Harris, of Alabama, who proved that when too much insulin has been given a diabetic he may suffer a collapse. In some cases, death has occurred in collapse of this kind. Every person who takes insulin should carry a few cubes of sugar or pieces of candy in his pocket for instant use if symptoms caused by a drop in blood pressure are felt. In bad cases the sugar must be used instantly if convulsions and death are to be avoided.

This is an illustration of an extreme condition due to low blood sugar. There are effects caused by a more moderate shortage. These should be better known, since they cause a certain amount of incompetence and discomfort. Among the symptoms of a mild sugar shortage are: sweating, poor coordination of muscles, tremor, a feeling of "gone-ness," a weakness felt at the pit of the stomach, and unreasonable fears.

Some of those who feel run down late in the day and need some sort of a pickup are suffering from the effects of sugar shortage. The pace we go burns up a lot of fuel to make energy. Of the several coals used to stoke the burners in order to get a quick heat, sugar is about the most important. Our tense way of living calls for so much of it that some one has said modern civilization would have been compelled to slow down had it not been for the can and beet fields. Many persons of this group use either coffee or liquor for a pickup. A few lumps of sugar would answer as well, and a period of quiet relaxation would be more physiologic still.

Probably Due to Feet.

Mrs. B. H. Z. writes: My husband complains of soreness, of aching in the legs from the ankles, in the calf, and, at times, the instep. He is 31 years old and enjoys good health except for the almost constant tired feeling in the legs. Could you give us some advice?

Reply: Most of the pains of the type you describe are due to the feet. Does he walk with the toes turned out? Has he weak feet or fallen arches? Are his shoes broad enough? Has he tried dusting his shoes, socks, and feet with a foot powder?

Highlights of the Annual Firemen's Parade as Caught by Post Cameramen

The NRA is brought out vividly on the float of Engine Company No. 24. The reproduction of the Blue Eagle brought applause from spectators.

Flanked by District Commissioner Luther H. Reichelderfer and Parade Marshal A. J. Bargagni, the Nation's leading fire hero is shown watching the parade from the official stand. He is Warren Dues, of Flint, Mich., a guest of The Post.

The rain-soaked colors of the Shippensburg, Pa., visiting firemen are shown passing the reviewing stand. The Pennsylvanians in their odd uniforms won applause.

Here is the prize-winning drum and bugle corps and a better aggregation has never marched up the Avenue. The picture was taken as the Vincent Costello Post, American Legion, marched past the reviewing stand, a sure-fire trophy winner.

The float of The Washington Post, sponsor of the mammoth parade. This beautifully decorated carriage is displaying a replica of the medal presented to Warren Dues, the national fire hero. Miss Virginia Jester and Fireman J. E. Smith, of No. 28 Engine Company, were warmly greeted by spectators along the line of march.

All Washington knows the reputation of the Fourth Police Precinct for playing Santa Claus to the needy around Christmas. The float of that precinct was one of the most popular in the parade.

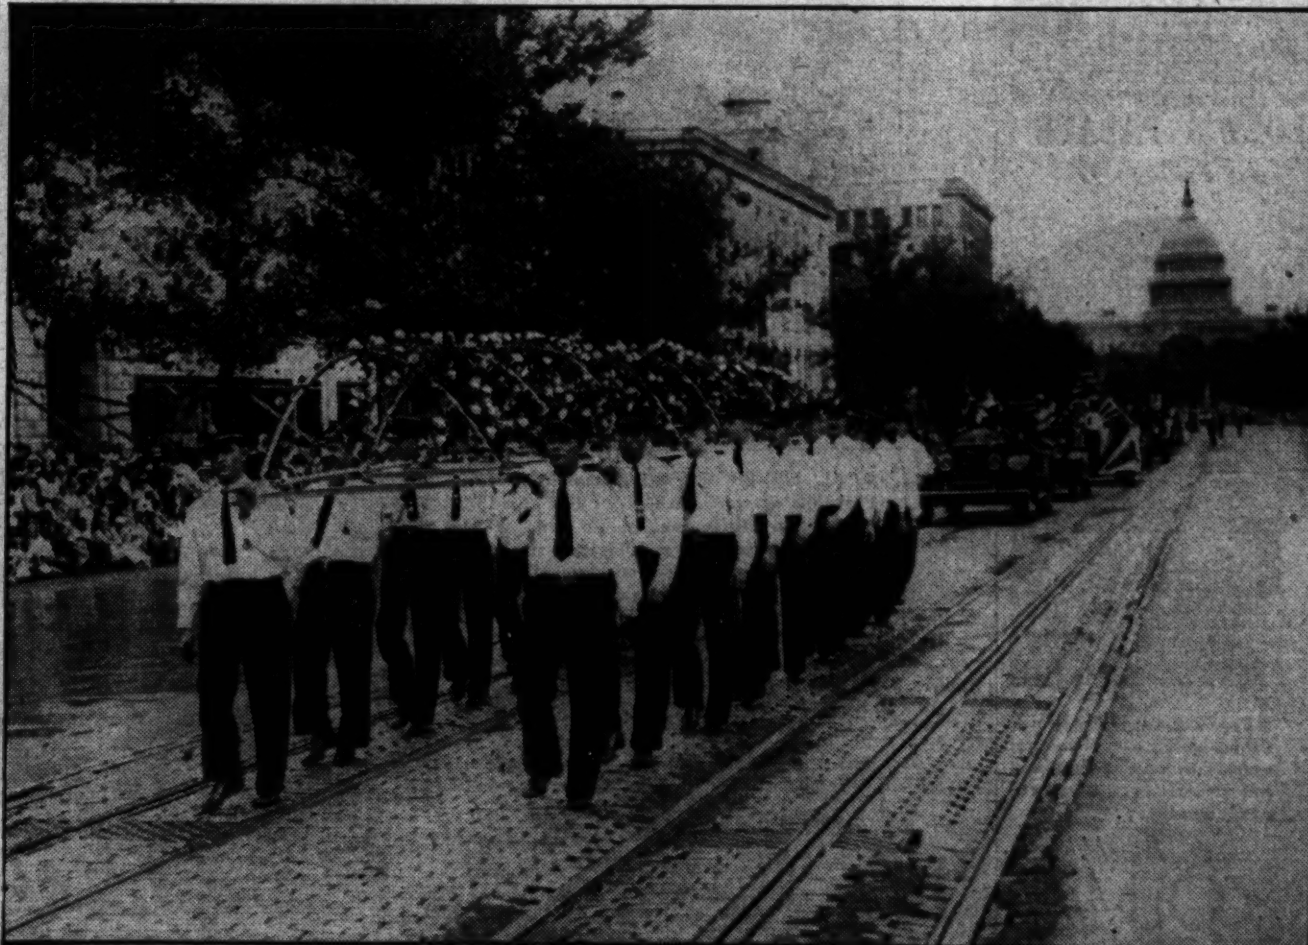

The official reviewers appeared to be in a happy mood despite the overcast skies. The scene was taken as the officials were viewing the parade from their stand on the Avenue. They are, left to right: Secretary of War Dern, Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post; Odell S. Smith, citizens committee chairman; Eugene MacLean, general manager of The Post, and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

These three little girls grabbed their father's rain coat when the first raindrop fell. They were able to keep their position on the curb while hundreds of others sought more substantial cover.

The crowd all along the line of march gave its annual salute to Mrs. Vernon T. Orrison, who for the last several years has acted as official hostess for the parade. She is the daughter of Marshal Bargagni.

The visiting firemen from the neighboring county of Montgomery are shown carrying this beautiful rose-covered float down the Avenue. Due to the torrential showers that almost swamped the parade shortly after it got under way, many of the floats were not photographed because of weather conditions.

Miss Lillian Kroener, selected as Miss Illinois for the national beauty contest at Atlantic City, adds her charms to the already colorful parade.

"Brooklyn Bonfire" Returns to Screen—National's Close Call—Best Sept. Films

Clara Bow to Begin 'Hoopa' Today for Fox

Corinne Griffith Has Tilt With Equity; News of Amusement World.

That dynamic redhead, whom someone has expressively dubbed the "Brooklyn Bonfire," is in again!

Which is to say that Clara Bow, one of the stormy petrels of the film business, today will begin work on her second Fox film, when "Hoopa," a thrilling story with a World's Fair background, will be placed in production at Fox Movietone City.

This film—which Fox already is modestly describing as "all-star"—will have Preston Foster in the leading male role. This assignment is regarded as more than a reward for the excellent work he did in the stellar role of "The Man Who Dared," a screen play based on the eventful life of the late Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago.

Young Richard Cromwell, who achieved his major fame by assuming the role in the talking version of Joseph Hergesheimer's "Tobacco David" that Richard Barthelmess played in the silent, also will have a prominent part in "Hoopa," as will Miss Ginevra, Herbert Mundin and Roger Imhof.

Frank Lloyd to Direct.

"Hoopa" will be directed by Frank Lloyd, who crowned his record of achievement as a director of silent pictures with "The Sign of the Cross" and "The Sign of the Cross," recently, won the plaudits of the world by the superlative quality of his picture of Noel Coward's "Cavalcade."

Miss Bow's last production for Fox was "Call Her Savage," which signaled her return to the films after an absence of almost two years. Since the completion of that flamboyantly melodramatic vehicle, the young woman whom Elinor Glyn denominated the "It Girl" has spent her time in traveling abroad and ruminating on the ranch where she and her husband, Rex Bell, own and operate in Nevada.

Although they say that travel is broadening, this hardly could have been the motivating consideration in inducing Miss Bow to make the trip to the other side. She was almost too broad when she made "Call Her Savage," as it was!

A Close Shave!

More difficulties than the public has suspected have surrounded the launching of the preliminary season of guest-star revivals at the National Theater.

While we have been sitting complacently awaiting the advent of that erstwhile beauty of the screen, Miss Corinne Griffith, in Noel Coward's "Design for Living," next Monday night, there has been a strong likelihood, a good deal of the time, that Miss Griffith never would arrive at the National to play in Mr. Coward's "Design for Living." This, of course, sounds fantastic and just a little cryptic. But "Actors' Equity is Actors' Equity," and you can't escape from that.

There reposes beside this type-writer a letter written by Clifford Brooks, director of the National's guest-star revivals, to Manager Stephen E. Cochran, setting forth the complications that have caused his blood in most unprecedented manner these past few days.

Years ago, it seems, Miss Griffith had an unpleasant few moments with the Equity representatives in Hollywood and refused point blank and with some emphasis to join their old organization, so there!

That was the situation when rehearsals of "Design for Living" got under way. Miss Griffith still was not a member of Actors' Equity.

So Actors' Equity forbade Miss Griffith's appearance in the play, or, failing that, barred any and all of their members from appearing with her in it.

So She Joined Equity.

At one juncture Miss Griffith even went so far as to throw up the whole business rather than submit to Equity dictation and suggested to Mr. Brooks that Judith Anderson be engaged in her place. Finally, after much persuasion, she reconsidered and the play will go on exactly as originally planned.

To make this possible, however, it was necessary for Miss Griffith to smother her own personal inclinations and preferences and become an Equity member—which she did. This action signified no surrender of principle on the star's part, but did stamp her as a considerate young woman with some thought for the welfare of others than herself and a thoroughly good sport.

There is no reason why Miss Griffith might not have utilized the Equity impasse as an excuse for abandoning the whole project and returning at once to Hollywood—which she is going to do, anyway, immediately following her Washington engagement at the National.

It is greatly to her credit that she took the course she did, acted wholly by the feelings of her associates in the company, the National management and the Washington public.

Corinne Griffith evidently is a pretty swell person.

To some of us it appears that at times Equity leans over just a little backward in enforcing the letter of its laws. One Equity membership hardly seems worth the sudden unemployment for a cast of a dozen or so, the backstage crew, the National Theater staff and the disappointment of the Washington public, times and the NRA being what they are!

Mr. Brooks Writes.

Incidentally, it may be put at precisely this juncture to quote one paragraph of Mr. Brooks's letter, which is as follows:

"We are going to give a good show of 'Design' and I am not now afraid of following the other company. Rehearsing Sunday and Labor Day No rest for the wicked. 'Following that excellent company so early, we HAVE to give a good show. I pity this play due to an usual stock manner. And don't get the idea that Corinne Griffith is temperamental. She is really a dear. It is only the Equity Union business that got her dander up.' So now you know."

Watch for the Opening!

As a matter of fact, there seems to be a good deal of this "preliminary season" business going on. Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, is the most recent to make known that the current "Greater Show Season" is not to be confused with the opening of the regular winter season on Fifteenth street, with the coming of Radio Pictures' film version of Sinclair Lewis' best-selling novel, "Ann Vickers," with Irene Dunne in the name part.

Advance murmurings already reaching the Capital by the usual grapevine routes are to the effect that the cinema rendering of "Ann Vickers" will prove to be even more sensational than the book itself—which, to those who have read it, seems laying it on a bit thick. There are passages in Mr. Lewis' major narrative that never would be countenanced on the silver sheet. It is no part of shrewd exploitation to give rise to expectations that they will be visible there when the picture is released.

Splendid Cast.

Surrounding Miss Dunne in this subject will be Walter Huston, Conrad Nagel, Bruce Cabot, Edna May Oliver, Sam Hardy, and a large number of other celebrities. Miss Dunne does not completely fulfill this department's idea of what Ann Vickers ought to be like, but perhaps it would not have selected her for the leading role in Fannie Hurst's "Back Street," either, and look at the fine piece of work she did in that!

Contemporaneously with the inauguration of its annual season of bigger and better box-office bets with "Ann Vickers" on September 29, RKO-Keith's will blossom out in new garb for the winter months. New drapes, carpets, doodads and investments will adorn the auditorium; the proscenium will be rejuvenated by dabs of paint here and there and the floor staff will be effulgent in new and natty uniforms, fresh from the tailor's needle and goose.

Our future book is waging as good as 8 to 5 that if there is an overture that week, it will be "Happy Days Are Here Again"—heaven forbid!

A distinctly feminine point of view ought to reflect itself in the camera version of "Ann Vickers," come to think of it, since the adaptation of "Red" Lewis' book was made by Jane Murnin, coauthor with Jane Cowl of "Smilin' Through" and individual author of many similarly popular works. Direction is by John Cromwell, one of the more thoughtful of the megaphone wielders.

We Are Taken to Task.

It is Mr. Harry C. Nash, a veteran observer of the theater and its people, who calls up to suggest the utter unreliability of one of this desk's "afterthoughts" in yesterday morning's column.

Mr. Nash's objection is to the statement that in "Broadway to Hollywood," the principals of the old Weber and Fields Music Hall Company all are impersonated, and none played by the actual troupe members of that remote day.

It is his view—and he may be right—that in "Whoopee Deedoo!" finale, executed in natural color, it is the real Weber and Fields who are dimly visible in the foreground in company with Fay Templeton, who really sings "Rosie," Marie Dressler, Willie Collier and DeWolf Hopper. Furthermore, insists Mr. Nash, it is Sabel Johnson who sings "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" in the same scene.

Clipped for This Spot.

Mr. Nash bases his contention largely on the fact that he was in Hollywood in 1930 when scenes for a picture to be known as "The March of Time" were being made with great elaborateness and with an army of famous show people appearing in them. Among them, he says, were the Technicolor scenes of "Broadway to Hollywood," which seem to have been clipped from the shelved prints of "March of Time," which was never released, for this brief and specific use. This might well be true.

We are urged by our attention-caller to observe the scene again closely and see if we do not agree that the old Weber and Fields group is really the Weber and Fields group, which assuredly we shall do as soon as we can obtain possession of a pair of binoculars of sufficient strength to bring those pygmy figures up to recognizable size amid the gargantuan surroundings that no Weber and Fields Music Hall ever possibly could have housed.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives who preceded "Broadway to Hollywood" to Washington, oddly, insist that while Weber and Fields and their associates are much talked about in the film, they did not appear in it in person, which still would be true if the scenes used are clipped from "The March of Time."

Guthrie McClintick, comes word from Ray Henderson, the erudite stentor of the Cornell-McClintick enterprises, will present Tallulah Bankhead in Owen Davis' new drama, "Jezebel," for the first time in New York at the Martin Beck Theater on Monday night, September 25. The first performance on any stage, however, will be given in the historic Walnut Street Theater, Philadelphia, on Monday, September 18, which effectively eliminates Washington from any of the "Jezebel" premiering.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker

Due to the holiday yesterday when government departments were closed, we were unable to complete recheck of votes sufficiently to announce winners of The Washington Post's Federal Diary Popularity Contest.

Tomorrow the winners will be announced along with final tabulation of ballots cast for the 58 employees nominated as the most popular woman and men in Federal service in Washington.

The best of the "Melodrama, Mystery and Crime" subjects are set forth as "Before Dawn," "Blind Adventure" and "Headline Shooter"—none of them seen here.

The "Comedy" classification has only two entries—"Her First Mate," liked here, and "Rafter Romance," not seen.

The report of "Moonlight and Pretzels," one of the best of the musicals, is divided about 50-50, for and against.

And every one likes what he likes, regardless of the other fellow, so what difference does it make?

Some of the wise ones, who profess to know which side of their theatrical bread is buttered and which isn't, are prepared to lay as high as 11 to 10 that the Shuberts will not operate a stock company in the Belasco Theater this season. The matter, however, is still cooking.

And didn't we have a Vice President of the United States somewhere back there—not Alexander Throthebottom, but another one?

Retiring last week after more than 32 years' service, Mrs. Lillian Ryan (*) was honored at an impressive ceremony at Chemistry and Soils, Agriculture. Her many friends in the department presented many gifts, including a lounging chair and good-sized greenbacks. Mrs. Ryan will continue to live at the Monroe Apartments.

The future of U. C. Deike's new son already is being mapped by employees in Veterans Administration. The 7-pound baby is slated for a cadet's job for his father when he is big enough to get out on the links at Belle Haven. Later, of course, there is the White House. Mrs. Deike and the youngster are doing well at George Washington Hospital.

An enjoyable dinner party was given by Miss Nellie Darling to adjudicators of Converted Insurance office, Veterans Administration. Miss Darling entertained at her home. To her was awarded a new automobile at a church carnival not long ago, and she is planning to drive it to her Iowa home soon. Bernard Woods is said to be driving instructor.

The golf links at Norfolk and the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach, had two enthusiastic customers during the holidays in the person of James Falch and William Madden, of ordinance, Navy.

Personals.

Miss Gladys Robinson, Commerce, has returned from a vacation at her home in St. Louis.

Clarence Parks is at his desk in Claims Division, Veterans Administration, after a trip to the Middle West and the World's Fair.

Thomas Gallizia, Postmasters

Division, Postoffice, is off to Boston for ten days with relatives.

Miss Marguerite Crenshaw, Agriculture, returned yesterday from a vacation in Bermuda. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Joseph W. Crenshaw, and her brother, Jacques, Commerce.

Dudley T. Reynolds, War, will depart tomorrow to visit his parents in Cincinnati for two weeks.

Mrs. James Leon Turner, Interior, is hostess to Mr. and Mrs. Francis Adair, Atlanta. Mrs. Adair, the former Miss Janet Logan, was an employee in Commerce before her marriage two years ago.

Arthur L. Wessberg, Cotton Contracts, Agriculture, passed the week-end in Atlantic City. Claiborne Durham, Treasury, motored with his family to Richmond.

Miss Dorothy Oden, G. A. O., will pass her vacation in New York beginning September 15.

E. V. Lewis, claims control, Internal Revenue, went fishing for the week-end.

Dr. Robert H. Canfield, laboratory, Navy, was in Baltimore yesterday.

George Mannas has challenged Miss Alice Dessart to a match game in the "ladder" standings of the Federal Chess Club. They are ranked in Class D by Director E. M. Knapp (*), Commerce, chess wizard.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF YOUR name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor the day of publication, except Saturday and Sunday, between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox, vaudeville, with Duncan Sisters, and on the screen, Claudette Colbert in "Three Corners Moon," or Loew's Palace, "Broadway to Hollywood," with Alice Brady and an all-star support. Persons whose names appear Saturday and Sunday call for tickets Monday.

Semifinalists in the Federal Checker Tournament will meet tonight at the clubhouse to decide the protest of E. C. Dietrich, Treasury. Other participants in the play will be H. A. Franklin, City Postoffice; O. M. Barker, G. A. O., and C. A. Cram, War, president of the Checker Club.

Today's Epitaph.

3,000 Crowd Sees Trey, Choice, Win Feature as Lincoln Fields Meet Opens

Virginia Bred 1 1/2-Length Victor

Dan Sabath, 50-1, 2d, With Speedy Skippy Finishing Third.

LINCOLN FIELD RACE TRACK, Chicago, Sept. 4 (AP).—Trey, born down in the valley of Old Virginia, captured the $2,500 added Jockey Handicap for 3-year-olds opening the eighteenth meeting at Lincoln Fields today, beating Dan Sabath, a 50-to-1 shot, by a length and a half, with Speedy Skippy third in a field of 10.

The 2-year-old son of Sir Barton, resting time, owned by the Audley Stock Farm, of Berryville, Va., went to the front soon after the start and never was headed. The winner ran the six furlongs in 1:12 1-5, with Jockey A. Richard astride his back.

Going to the post the 2-to-1 favorite, Trey paid $6.04 to win, $4.16 to place and $3.40 to show. The place price on Dan Sabath was $2.72, with $1.84 to show, while Speedy Skippy, which had been coupled with Dan Sabath as a Jack Howard entry, paid $4.32 to show.

Howard, the Lexington, Ky., turfman, scratched Don Manuel, relying on Speedy Skippy for victory. The race, the first stake of the Lincoln Fields fall meeting, drew a crowd of 30,000 spectators.

When the barrier was sprung, Dan Sabath broke in front with Trey in hot pursuit, and Risky Miss, another heavily played favorite, trailing them. Before they had reached the quarter post Trey overhauled Dan Sabath and was never headed thereafter. Speedy Skippy lost ground in the stretch run, but closed with plenty of speed.

Dear Al: Lincoln Fields, September 4. P-I-V-E W-I-N-N-E-R-S!

Please tell the printers to keep this line in type as I expect it to be used regularly during this meeting. Today they tried to scratch your old pal, Bill, right out of the picture. But he socked the card for his five. Here they are: Port of Play, $14; Louie Dear, $4.20; Trinchera, $3.38; Trey, $6.04; and Aladdin's Dream, $6.28.

I told you that Mike and I were going to hand the bookies a trouncing. And tomorrow is another day, so I must get out the books and dig for some more profitable propositions.

First race—To be truthful, I have to even look at this race. This band of juveniles is hard enough to guess without the "maiden" tag attached. However, the boss insists on three, so here goes: In Par, Bostonian Gal and Snow Play.

Second race—Blackleg appears to be the most formidable of this gang. Shares top weight with Uncle Henry and son of them may run one or two. Lampskid is the one I'm afraid of. Has a way of wiggling into the money when overlooked in the betting.

Third race—Prince Drake looks like the goods in this sprint. Goes well both in races and in trials and will be hard to top despite the weight. Billy Bit and Bicolor to do the chief chasing.

Fourth race—Brown Wisdom, as I have said before, seldom runs two alike. Scratched today with this in view that he may run one or two. Lampskid is the one I'm afraid of. Has a way of wiggling into the money when overlooked in the betting.

Fifth race—Foxiana gets the Benning's call here. Cold Check ran a bad one last out, but in this view that he may run one or two. Lampskid is the one I'm afraid of. Has a way of wiggling into the money when overlooked in the betting.

Sixth race—The light-weighted Copley Square may not be the worst of this group and has a fighting chance to take it all. I'm going to string along. Volcan and Crapshoot seem as likely to be in the money as the others.

Seventh race—El Cidlo has been the medium of a Benning's killing before. I understand this one is oiled and greased. Will go for heavy duty and make Brains to complete the money picture.

Eighth race—This about all the field Betting on can stand these days, but he seems to be well suited. If it's a contest, I look for Kingpin to do the pressing. Waterport to show.

Allen Makes Ace. W. H. Allen scored a hole in 1 on the 128-yard fourth at Argyle Club yesterday. He used a machie.

Twist of Fate Lands Robbery Suspect in Jail

Fight Over Coat, Said to Be Honest Th'ng He Had, Is Man's Waterloo.

A twist of fate yesterday brought the arrest of Willie Banks, colored, alleged housebreaker, who has been the object of a city-wide search by the Detective Bureau for the last year.

Willie, said to have broken into 200 Washington homes, met his Waterloo in an argument over a raincoat, the only object in his possession which police said he had come by honestly.

Banks and Robert Reed, 28, colored, 305 Congress court northwest, were arrested in the 1200 block of Seventh street northwest in Post office building yesterday afternoon when they came to blows over a raincoat which Banks is said to have loaned Reed.

Detectives Make Arrest.

The arrests were made by Detective Sergeants James Collins and Mike Dowd.

They brought Banks to headquarters, where he was definitely identified by his fingerprints.

So cleverly did Banks operate that police have recovered very little of the stolen property. He is thought to have sent most of the alleged loot to Middlewest States, particularly Ohio and Indiana, where it was sold to secondhand dealers, police said.

Banks, according to police records, has served time off and on since he was 17 years old. He escaped from the Richmond, Va., jail in 1927.

Eight Others Jailed.

Police also have arrested eight other colored men in connection with the robberies Banks is alleged to have committed. They are believed to have worked under his direction in his alleged housebreakings.

Though he has been identified only in a dozen cases, police are certain that he took part in hundreds of other housebreakings in Washington during the past year. They are convinced of Banks' connection with the cases owing to the peculiar way in which he is said to work, usually by breaking the glass to unlock a door and taking only clothing and jewelry of great value.

Postal Worker Still Held Here

Orders Never Received for Return to North Dakota, Say D. C. Police.

Though he was supposed to have been returned to North Dakota on charges of stealing $7,000 of post office funds, Ole T. Nelson, 50, was still at the District Jail this morning and police officials said they had not received orders for his return.

Postal authorities learned yesterday Nelson was still here after they advised St. Paul authorities he had been taken back several days ago. They could not explain why he was still held at the District Jail today.

A former postmaster at Stanley, N. Dak., Nelson surrendered to Policemen H. A. Matney several weeks ago after the policeman had bought dinner for him. He is said to have confessed at that time at stealing the $7,000 in postoffice funds to care for his family.

Inspector Thomas M. Milligan of the Postoffice Department, in charge of the case, was said at his office yesterday to be out of the city. He said they did not know when Nelson would be returned to North Dakota.

Stage Carpenter Dies Suddenly at Theater

His brother, John T. Hurley, also a stage carpenter at the Fox, was working near the stricken man when he collapsed. Members of the Theatrical Stage Employees Union, Local No. 22, will make funeral arrangements. He lived at 716 C street southwest.

Runaway Girl Fails to Outwit City Detectives

Washingtonian Beats Hotel Clerks, But New York Police Trace Trunk.

The 13-year-old Washington girl who dressed as a grown-up and outwitted New York hotel clerks was on her way back here last night with her mother.

The girl, Alma G. May, was found in a New York hotel by detectives Sunday night, who traced her trunk from the railroad station.

She had given her name as Natasha Laloy.

Police here said the girl ran away from her mother, Mrs. Gene May, 3015 Fourteenth street northwest, while they were vacationing in Atlantic City Saturday.

When detectives entered her hotel room she denied indignantly she was the 13-year-old Alma. She failed to convince the detectives, however, and was taken to the Children's Society, where her mother called for her yesterday.

U. S. Must Crush Crime, Says Roper

Failure to Do So Invites Disaster, He Declares.

(Associated Press.)

Crushing of crime was called last night a question of "positive, national self-preservation," by Secretary of War Clegg, in a speech before the Roper in pledging all Federal support toward wiping it out.

In an address under the auspices of the United States Flag Association, one of the organizations leading in the campaign on criminalism, Roper said:

"Racketeering rots the character of a people. It is insidious, corrosive, profoundly disintegrative. Crime, particularly organized crime, attacks the foundations of our social and economic structure and renders the whole edifice shaky."

Failing to cope with it vigorously, he continued, was an invitation to disaster.

Home Looted of $131.

The home of Wilbur LeRoe, 4900 Linnean avenue northwest, was reported ransacked last night and jewelry and clothing valued at $131 stolen. LeRoe named a suspect.

Show Indian 'Bites the Dust'

Performer in "Wild West" Shot With Real Buckshot.

"Wild West" at the National City Fair took on too much realism last night and an Indian performer was in Casualty Hospital as the result.

The Wild West show was under way. Cowboys' guns barked. Indians whooped.

Police reported one of the performers fired a shotgun at Lawrence Williams, a show Indian. Williams literally "bit the dust," and didn't get up. He had been hit in the chest by a charge of buckshot from what was supposed to have been a blank cartridge.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where the shot was picked from his body. His condition was not serious.

Preliminary judging of the 300-odd entries in the "baby-kiddle" contests will be the feature of a 10-day program at the fair. The age limit is 5 years. Winners will be named Saturday, closing day of the fair, sponsored by Police and Fire Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Today's judging will begin at 1 o'clock.

Postal Service Drops Payless Furlough Plan

Step Due to Revenue Rise; Other Departments' Action Awaited.

The Postoffice Department, which blazed the trail among Federal establishments in substituting payless furloughs for dismissals, took the lead again yesterday in abolishing all administrative furloughs in the postal service.

The announcement was the second favorable development for economy-harassed Federal workers in less than a week. Saturday the Navy Department gave 45,000 field workers back half the pay cut it ordered with the imposition of the five-day week in August.

Increased Revenues Foreseen.

Decision to discontinue postal furloughs after the nine-day payless leave period for the quarter ending September 30 has elapsed was said to have been owing to better economies and expectation of increased revenues.

It was announced simultaneously in Atlantic City before the National Association of Letter Carriers by Postmaster General Farley, and in Chicago by Assistant Postmaster General Joseph C. O'Mahoney, before the convention of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks.

Mr. Farley insisted abandonment of the furlough policy is possible only owing to progress made in the NRA drive. Mr. O'Mahoney said revenues were mounting.

Others Delay Action.

Although numerous old line departments followed the postoffice lead in invoking furloughs to absorb fund cuts, there have been no indications any will be in position to restore all workers to a full-time basis until more adequate funds are available.

Confidence expressed by Mr. Farley, however, that the Nation on the way back to "good times" raised hopes of Federal groups that steady advances in prices might enable the President soon to lift the 15-per cent pay cut, now based on the disparity between 1928 and 1933 prices.

Police Refute Ambush Story

Imagination Blamed for Report Children Were Under Fire.

Prince Georges County police yesterday branded as "a childish imagination" the story that several youngsters were fired on from ambush near their homes at Lanham, Md., last Saturday.

"There might have been a possibility that someone was shooting an air rifle in the vicinity," said William E. Clifton, the officer assigned to the case. "But I believe the story was concocted by the children, who were playing Indian."

Clifton also denied that reports of motorists being fired on while traveling on the Defense Highway had ever been turned in to county police.

The children who said they were fired on are Marjorie Kempton, 13, daughter of James H. Kempton, Department of Agriculture botanist; John Cook, 12, and his sisters, Barbara, 8, and Victoria, 5. The latter are children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cook. Mr. Cook is editor of the Journal of Heredity.

Those who have no cars will be provided with transportation in 18 buses, chartered for that purpose.

Losses Billfold at Parade.

Shortly after being jostled during the Firemen's Parade yesterday Leonard Einhorn, 615 Maryland avenue southwest, discovered his billfold was missing from his pocket. He told police it contained $10.

Clothing Worth $81 Stolen.

Clothing valued at $81 was stolen from the home of Miss Peggy Dawson, 1490 Newton street northwest, yesterday. She told police the thieves entered by smashing a rear window.

Doubts Small Bank Aid.

"If the larger private bankers hesitate to accept the liabilities of acting as sponsoring underwriters, then the question occurs whether the issuing company can directly utilize the services of the smaller dealers of the country to distribute its securities to the public."

"It may well be doubted whether such dealers would be willing to pledge their individual fortunes to such an unknown liability. Under the Glass banking act banks may no longer act as underwriters or distributors of such securities, and the question is still how could the general business of the country provide the necessary investment funds from the public. The question awaits an answer under this act."

The private bankers themselves at present are doing no more than mark time, for they expect the big corporations which now are in need of money to make the overtures for a change to Congress—or even direct to President Roosevelt—in the near future.

Fear Investors' Suits.

Under the present setup, they said, if an inconsequential error is made in the report accompanying

Freedom Held Isles' Doom

Gen. Creed C. Hammond, Former Governor of the Philippines, Declares That Revolution Would Follow Independence.

Independence for the Philippine Islands will mean their disaster, in the opinion of Gen. Creed C. Hammond, recent controller general of the islands, who arrived in Washington yesterday.

Gen. Hammond, who resigned last June, declared if the Philippines are given their independence a revolution will result. The few political leaders who desire independence appear to be blind to these consequences, the general said.

The average run of Filipinos are ignorant of conditions and the destiny of the islands in the hands of the few political leaders, Gen. Hammond reported.

Leaving the Philippines last June, Gen. Hammond, accompanied by his wife, toured the greater part of Europe. He found considerable agitation over the activities of Hitler, Mussolini, in Gen. Hammond's opinion, is the greatest man in Europe.

Americans, the general said, are thronging Europe and spending freely.

Gen. Hammond is staying at the Washington Hotel. He will be in the Capital all this week.

Bankers Seek to Soften New Federal Law on Securities

Stringent Sales Control Threatens Business, They Declare.

A campaign to modify the liability provisions of the new securities act at the next session of Congress was forecast last night as the result of private bankers' complaints it is ruining their business.

The act, designed to prevent issuance of fraudulent securities, requires filing of a complete statement of facts regarding each issue with the Federal Trade Commission. These, in turn, must be passed on to the buying public by the stock salesman.

So great are penalties for erroneous statements by the issuing and selling companies, it was charged, that few big corporations are floating securities which they need to retire maturing obligations.

Nothing to Sell.

As a result, private bankers charge, there are no new securities to sell, other than municipal and Government bonds, and their business is at a standstill. Between 30 and 40 concerns in Washington were said to be affected.

Chairman Fletcher, of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, who largely was responsible for the act, denied the sections particularly complained of—Nos. 11 and 15—handicap the issuance and sale of honest securities.

"I think the corporations and private bankers will realize this," he said, "and I shall oppose any effort to weaken the law. It is right that directors of corporations should be liable in the event securities issued by their companies are misrepresented."

Gives Bankers' Side.

A different story was told by Paul V. Keyser, Washington counsel for the Investment Bankers Association of America.

While not a party to any campaign to revise the law, he said, the liability provisions are so stringent as to "raise a serious question as to whether under this act it will be possible to find adequate private capital to undertake carrying out the necessary and essential financing of the larger business enterprises of the country."

Doubts Small Bank Aid.

"If the larger private bankers hesitate to accept the liabilities of acting as sponsoring underwriters, then the question occurs whether the issuing company can directly utilize the services of the smaller dealers of the country to distribute its securities to the public."

"It may well be doubted whether such dealers would be willing to pledge their individual fortunes to such an unknown liability. Under the Glass banking act banks may no longer act as underwriters or distributors of such securities, and the question is still how could the general business of the country provide the necessary investment funds from the public. The question awaits an answer under this act."

The private bankers themselves at present are doing no more than mark time, for they expect the big corporations which now are in need of money to make the overtures for a change to Congress—or even direct to President Roosevelt—in the near future.

Women Extend NRA Canvass Another Week

Littlepage Opens Inquiry Into Alleged Code Violations.

Local women NRA workers will extend their canvassing another week, it was announced last night by Mrs. Grattan Kerans because of the large territory yet uncanvassed. Many department dwellers returning this week from vacations remain to be approached. Workers will report Thursday morning in a meeting at Board of Trade headquarters in the Star Building.

Investigation of charges that a large number of employers are violating the maximum hour and minimum wage provisions of the NRA code will be begun today by Thomas P. Littlepage, general of the campaign. However, it is pointed out, no action can be taken against violators until 100 per cent cooperation has been obtained between employers and consumers.

Employers who find that their business will be harmed if they observe the code are advised to communicate with the local NRA. A stay of execution will be granted in worthy cases and the employers will be allowed to continue displaying the Blue Eagle.
